Rebels' Junta Defiant As Franco-British Note Challenges Blockade

Eden Hints Acceptance of Port Ban if Zone of Safety Is Fixed.

Madrid Attackers Cross Manzanares

Insurgents Insist Paris Give Up $250,000,000 of Loyalist Gold.

The European Situation.

The Spanish rebel government last night defied a Franco-British warning on the proposed blockading of Barcelona. It answered suggestions of "piracy" by citing recognition of its regime by Italy and Germany.

At Paris a further threat of international complications arose when Rebel General Franco warned he will file claim to $250,000,000 in gold deposited in France by loyalists.

At London suggestions for a safety zone of foreign shipping at Barcelona were discussed and it was indicated Britain will try to keep its ships clear of the danger area.

Government forces in Madrid retreated across the Manzanares River, but claimed gains in the northwestern section of the city. Terrified citizens fled to the center of the capital as the bombardments continued in the outskirts. A severe food shortage was reported.

Franco Is Defiant.

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 20.—The Spanish Nationalist junta replied defiantly today to a Franco-British warning that the threatened rebel blockade of Barcelona might constitute piracy on the high seas.

Sir Henry Chilton, British Ambassador to Spain, acting on behalf of both his government and France, pointed out in a communication to Gen. Francisco Franco's headquarters at Burgos that the bold Nationalist action might contravene international maritime law.

Technically, at least, Franco's warships which would be used in any blockade might be classed as pirate craft, because they were seized from "the established Spanish government."

The answer from Burgos was prompt and curt.

Franco said Burgos—and not Valencia, to which the Loyalist government has been transferred from Madrid—is the legal government of Spain, and has been recognized as such by Italy, Germany and several smaller nations.

Chilton, presently at Hendaye, on the French side of the northern Spanish frontier, is seeking an extension of the four-day warning given by Franco to foreign ships in the Port of Barcelona. At the same time he pursued the British plan of seeking establishment of a safety zone in Barcelona Harbor for the craft of neutral powers.

Rebels' Strength Inferior

Until the status of a belligerent has been granted to Franco by France and Britain it is likely the two countries will recognize only a de facto blockade. Furthermore, it was pointed out here, the rebel generalissimo might find extreme difficulty in enforcing his threat. Naval craft under rebel command, although better manned than Loyalist ships, are inferior in number.

Davies Is Named by Roosevelt As U. S. Ambassador to Russia

Former Head of F. T. C. Refused Same Post Under Wilson.

By Sidney Olson.

A boy from Watertown, Wis., who always wanted to live in a palace, realized his dream yesterday.

This boy, now 60 years old, internationally known as a corporation lawyer and the husband of one of the 23 wealthiest women in the country, is Joseph E. Davies, who was appointed American Ambassador to Soviet Russia yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Mr. Davies, a solidly built man whose photographs always show him in wing collar, Ascot tie, cutaway coat and spats, surprised a dozen reporters by receiving them yesterday in his first press conference wearing a simple gray sack suit and some cracked old shoes which looked very comfortable.

The former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and Commissioner of Corporations under President Wilson, Davies once refused the same post he accepted yesterday—a post whose headquarters are in one of the most spacious palaces left in Moscow, where the huge ballroom is of white marble and the bathroom has jade appurtenances.

He told reporters that he turned down this post, that of Ambassador to Italy and the Governor Generalship of the Philippines, all proffered by President Wilson, because he wanted to run for the Senate from Wisconsin in 1918.

"It was a three-cornered race,"

Paper Ban Arouses Citizens, Fight to Repeal Rider Opens

'Vicious Result' of Law, Says Mrs. Chapin at League of Women Voters; Dr. Fitzpatrick Challenges Federation to Make Clear Its Stand.

Aroused by suppression of two news weeklies in the District school system because they carried articles on Russia, District citizenry began organizing yesterday for a determined fight to repeal the "red rider" at the next session of Congress.

Refusal of District school authorities to allow distribution of the two publications, the Weekly News Review and the American Observer, to 5,000 civics, history and economics pupils was termed "one of the vicious results of the red rider" by Mrs. Edward Chapin at a legislative meeting of the voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters.

Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, dean of the Columbus University Law School, in a radio appeal to all citizens to join in the fight for repeal of the statute fathered by former Representative Blanton, of Texas, broadcast by Station WMAL, declared:

"We believe this law has dragged our community back to the dark days of bigotry, fanaticism and intolerance. Its operation is a stumbling block in the path of intellectual progress and it is breeding disrespect in the minds of our children toward lawfully constituted authority in the public schools."

Call Law "Puritanical."

Commenting on suppression of the magazine by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, on the grounds they conflicted with the intent of the red rider, Dr. Fitzpatrick said:

"It was perfectly proper, according to the law, for these school magazines to discuss freely and openly the merits and demerits of fascism, but when it came to the subject of Russia, Dr. Ballou, following out the mandate of a puritanical piece of legislation, was forced to call an abrupt halt to distribution of the periodicals."

Challenging the Federation of Citizens Associations to make its position on the red rider clear, Dr. Fitzpatrick said "a majority of

Work-Relief End Is Asked By Trade Unit

Chamber Report Urges Gradual Curtailment of Aid.

Group Pledges Help in Campaign to Put Men Back to Work.

Demanding that Federal work-relief be gradually shut down, and predicting absorption of the unemployed will closely parallel the present business recovery, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday promised a renewed drive against industrial unemployment.

The chamber's special committee on employment, headed by John W. O'Leary, said at the conclusion of a detailed 20-page report that it desired "to lay emphasis upon its convictions that work-relief as provided by the Federal Government should be brought to a close . . . the committee . . . does not propose sudden and instantaneous stoppage."

Harper Sibley, president of the chamber, speaking last night apparently with regard to the growing talk of greater co-operation between business and Government, said the attitude of the chamber is "that the Government is entitled to the support and co-operation of the citizenship."

"That rule is universal. It also works both ways," he said in a broadcast address to the executive committee of the chamber. "The Government is entitled to the expression of honest criticism, based upon fact and experience, regarding any steps that it may take. Business is likewise entitled to consideration on the part of the Government."

Business is as much interested as the Government itself, he added, in solution of problems standing in the way of national progress. "Steady employment, high wages and general prosperity are as advantageous to it as to any class or group," he maintained.

220,000 Workers Absorbed.

Of the eventual end of work relief, the unemployment committee said:

"Those gradual steps should be taken which are always essential when adjustments have to be made upon a considerable scale.

"There is at present danger that, ceasing to have work for unemployed persons at its function, this

Rise in Taxes Unnecessary, Harrison Says

1938 Budget's Balance by Economy, Higher Revenue Forecast.

Revision of Present Act Possible if Required, Doughton Asserts.

By Robert C. Albright.

Government spending can be brought into balance with Federal revenues in the next fiscal year without increasing taxes but by maintaining them substantially at present levels, Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee said yesterday.

Harrison, one of two men charged by the President with a Congressional survey of the Nation's tax structure, said the budget will be balanced in the 1938 fiscal year if Congress economizes and revenues continue to mount. He said there "absolutely" will be no increase in taxes.

His forecast was bolstered by continued improvement in the Treasury revenue outlook. It was informally estimated income from taxes may rise to $6,000,000,000 for the present fiscal year, as against $4,115,956,000 for 1936, and $3,800,467,000 for 1935.

Before leaving for North Carolina, Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, collaborating with Harrison in directing Congressional tax studies, was definite about the future tax picture.

Committee Has "Open Mind."

Asked for comment on business criticism of the undistributed earnings tax, Doughton replied:

"There has never been an expert who could write a bill that would satisfy all taxpayers. All I care to say is that our committee has an open mind, and if at the next session there appears to be need for changes in this law, we will recommend that they be made."

Headed by Harrison and Doughton, both House and Senate committeemen comprising the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue will meet next month to receive reports from their experts, the Mississippian indicated.

On the basis of a preliminary survey, Harrison believes only minor changes will be made in the undivided profits tax, correcting "imperfections and inequities as

LABOR BOARD MEMBER WARNS CONSTITUTION CHANGE NEEDED

United Mine Workers Board Also Urges Change if Court Voids Social Laws, Offers Sweeping Welfare Program.

Developments on the Troubled Labor Front.

The American Federation of Labor convention at Tampa voted to boycott clothing made by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, headed by Sidney Hillman, associate of John L. Lewis in the C. I. O. "rebel" movement.

Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, urged the convention to demand a constitutional amendment to preserve New Deal legislation. The plea found favor with a number of Senators here.

The executive board of the United Mine Workers also called for such an amendment, but John L. Lewis, head of the union, held the constitutional change may be unnecessary in view of the election "mandate."

Legislation for stabilization of both hard and soft coal industries, higher wages, shorter hours and improved housing was among other demands of the miners' board.

Program Comprehensive.

Sponsoring a sweeping program of economic and labor legislation, the executive board of the United Mine Workers of America yesterday called for a constitutional amendment if legislative social reforms "cannot be effectively enforced."

Supplementing the committee's action, John L. Lewis, bluff and outspoken president of the union, told reporters "Congress now has a mandate from the people" and a constitutional amendment should not be necessary.

Earlier, every member of the Mine Workers' board except Lewis wired heated statement to President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, denying his charges that the board's "cease and desist" order against him represented only the personal views of Lewis.

The United Mine Workers is one of the unions comprising the Committee for Industrial Organization suspended by Green's A. F. of L. council for independently promoting mass unionization of labor. The board's order to Green, a member of their union, was the Mine Workers' most recent reply to the suspension.

Coal Stabilization Urged.

First place among the board's legislative recommendations was accorded "National legislation for the stabilization of the bituminous and anthracite coal industry." The Guffey bill enacted last session, with Mine Worker backing, and later invalidated by the Supreme Court, dealt only with the bituminous industry. If anthracite operatives can be persuaded to co-operate, an anthracite bill will be offered this session, following formulation of a new bituminous control bill, Lewis said.

The United Mine chief, who campaigned for return of the New Deal, said his union failed to "particularize" on legislative details, as it plans to "work in co-operation with the Administration" in pushing labor legislation he said the President promised in his Madison Square Garden speech.

Other State Laws Asked.

One resolution called for "higher wages, shorter hours, improved working conditions, improved housing conditions and a measure which will provide for a more comprehensive and adequate social security legislation."

The board recommended enactment of State labor relations acts, closely following lines of the national labor relations law.

Other proposals for uniform State legislation included a State anti-injunction act, extension of workmen's compensation laws, extension of the principle of the miners' certificate laws, acts prohibiting the payment of local peace officers by private corporations, laws protecting civil liberties from any interference, laws eliminating abuses of evictions by employers in labor disputes and acts eliminating unincorporated communities of the Weirton, W. Va., type.

C. I. O. Becomes Issue.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 20.—The first open clash in the bitter C. I. O. war burst onto the floor of the American Federation of Labor convention tonight when delegates voted to boycott the label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, one of the "rebel" unions.

The Amalgamated is headed by Sidney B. Hillman, an active associate of John L. Lewis in the Committee for Industrial Organization. If enforced, the boycott would prevent all unionists from purchasing clothes that bear the Amalgamated label.

The boycott motion was proposed in the report of the executive council, which suspended Lewis and his aides. Federation leaders insisted the action was not in reprisal for Hillman's C. I. O activities, but was caused by his violation of an agreement made in 1933 when his union was admitted to the A. F. of L.

Under this agreement, Hillman agreed to use the label of the United Garment Workers, headed by Thomas Rickert. This agreement was scrapped in October and Hillman initiated use of his own label when his union was suspended.

A brief but sharp floor tussle preceded acceptance of the council's proposal.

Max Saritsky, head of the cap, hat and millinery workers and a C. I. O. associate, demanded to know whether the United Garment Workers could produce enough clothes to meet the demands of all unionists.

Rickert Affirms Output.

Rickert was called to the platform. "Yes," he shouted.

An unidentified delegate asked if working conditions weren't better in amalgamated plants than in those controlled by United Garment Workers.

"No," Rickert said tartly.

Frank X. Martel, an official of the Typographical Union, of Detroit, Mich., protested that to outlaw the Hillman label was to make every man who wants to wear a suit of custom-made clothes "get a suit of overalls."

"The United Garment Workers can't make enough clothes for all of us, so what's the use of kidding ourselves?" he asked.

Martel moved to table the proposal but his motion was defeated overwhelmingly.

Earlier, the convention heard Edwin S. Smith, a member of the National Labor Relations Board, plead that the federation send millions of workers out to fight for a Constitutional amendment which would safeguard social legislation from court attacks.

Warns of Court Tests.

Smith warned the Fifty-sixth Annual Federation Convention that two acts of profound concern to the Nation's toilers—the Social Security Act and the National Labor Relations Law—now are before the United States Supreme Court for a final test of their validity.

Even though the court adopts a more liberal attitude toward these measures than it has toward other New Deal legislation, such as the NRA, AAA, the Guffey act and the railroad pension law, Smith declared, the rulings would not afford adequate security for the future.

"Only the power of the Federal

Gen. Denhardt Jailed in Death Of His Fiancee

By the Associated Press.

New Castle, Ky., Nov. 20.—Kentucky's picturesque military figure, Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, was committed to Jefferson County Jail at Louisville today after his examining trial here on a charge of murdering his fiancee.

County Judge A. S. Morgan refused to renew the $25,000 bail on which Denhardt had been free since Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor's brother had sworn out a murder warrant. Denhardt was held on the murder charge to the grand jury. Its next regular session will start January 18. Judge Morgan ordered him held in jail in Louisville, a more commodious place than the small one here. Denhardt's counsel said they would try to release him on a habeas corpus.

George Baker, a farmer, testified to hearing two shots, one "awful loud, awful near," 10 or 15 minutes before he came out of his house, and another "like a little pop gun" later and at a time when he saw Denhardt standing by his automobile.

Baker also declared that after the second shot he went up to Denhardt and the latter said, "A lady was with me and went up the road to look for her glove." Baker added that Denhardt reached into his car and then exclaimed, "The gun's gone."

"He seemed very frightened," Baker testified, "and said, 'Ain't that awful. My, my, she was the finest woman I ever knew."

County Attorney James Thomas hammered at this in arguing that Judge Morgan should bind over the veteran.

"What did Denhardt know?" demanded Thomas.

"Why did he speak of her in the past tense if all he knew was that she had gone up the road to find a lost glove?"

The Henry County courtroom was packed to its 850 capacity before the hearing opened. Judge Morgan then locked the doors.

When County Attorney Thomas spoke of jail for Denhardt there was a short outburst of shouts and cheers.

The 60-year-old veteran of three wars, former lieutenant governor and former adjutant general, and the comely bluegrass widow, 20 years his junior, went automobile riding the night of November 6. She was found shot to death in a roadside ditch late that night. Denhardt's service revolver lay by her side.

Ohio Pay Law Upheld in Test By U. S. Judges

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 20.—A three-judge Federal court, in the face of the U. S. Supreme Court's invalidation of the New York minimum wage law, held constitutional today an almost identical Ohio statute.

The tribunal, composed of Judge Florence Allen of the Sixth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals and Federal District Judges Robert Nevin and Mell G. Underwood, ruled that Ohio's minimum wage law was "distinguishable" from the New York act, recently invalidated by the Supreme Court, and a District of Columbia law held unconstitutional 13 years ago.

Constitutionality of the laws were challenged on the ground they contravened a guarantee of liberty of contract.

The decision, read by Judge Allen, said the Ohio law set minimum wages based on "the value of the service or class of service rendered."

The Supreme Court, in invalidating the New York statute, considered itself bound by the New York Court of Appeals interpretation of the act. The New York court felt the law attempted to fix wages on a basis of what was "sufficient to meet the minimum cost of living necessary for health."

Mrs. Agnes B. Dickinson, Columbus attorney, who tested the Ohio law's constitutionality, declared she would carry the case to the Supreme Court as soon as possible.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 20 (AP).—The Charles Vance Millar will is valid, Justice Middleton ruled today, but valid "for the mothers of legitimate children only."

Roosevelt Ship Is Due to Reach Trinidad Today

Radio and Air Mail Keep President in Touch With Washington.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard U. S. S. Chester at Sea, Nov. 20.—The Cruiser Indianapolis, bearing President Roosevelt to the inter-American conference at Buenos Aires, sped southward tonight through the Caribbean Sea.

Moving at 25 knots an hour or better, the Indianapolis was west of the Windward Islands. She was due at Trinidad at 8 a. m. tomorrow for a six-hour refueling stop.

President Roosevelt rose early to see the ship make the passage between the Virgin Islands and Culebra Island. Three Marine planes from St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, dipped overhead in salute.

The weather was hot and the sea moderate. Many of those in the party took sun-baths.

Keeps Close Touch.

On the distant Cruiser Indianapolis, President Roosevelt, with the aid of the powerful naval communications service, continued today to serve as the Nation's Chief Executive.

A dual communications service combining radio and air mail is being used to keep the President in close touch with the White House during his 12,000-mile round trip to the inter-American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires.

For urgent business of state, the Chief Executive relies on the Indianapolis' wireless to transmit his instructions to Washington and to speed to him in turn information concerning matters, developing in his absence, which require his early attention.

He sends an average of about one radio message daily.

President Roosevelt also communicates at times directly with Cabinet members.

For affairs in which the time element is not an urgent factor, the President depends upon a regular mail-pouch service operated via Pan American Airways to bring him White House mail and newspapers.

Miss Stevens Arrives.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 20 (AP).—Miss Doris Stevens, president of the Inter-American Commission of Women, reached here tonight to seek action on the question of women's rights at the inter-American peace conference. When the governing board of the Pan-American Union drafted the agenda at its July meeting it barred that question, she said.

Drive Lagging, Leaders Warn Chest Workers

Gifts Still Far Short of Needs With but Three Days Left to Go.

Artistic camera studies of faces of some who depend on the city's generosity in filling the Community Chest will tell why giving should be a joy —in the first page of The Post's rotogravure section tomorrow.

Far short of its goal and with only three days to go, Washington's ninth annual Community Chest campaign faced a "grave situation" last night as leaders rallied their forces to press a last-minute drive toward the necessary quota of $1,969,000.

The specter of defeat, however, failed to dampen the spirits of nearly 1,000 Chest workers who gathered at yesterday's report meeting in the Willard Hotel. Determined to "dig in" over the week-end and boost the drive toward success, the enthusiastic workers heard latest returns showing that 117,363 donors have thus far contributed a total of $1,349,380.28, or 69.54 per cent of the goal.

Spurred forward by inspiring words from Chairman Coleman Jennings, unit solicitors hailed yesterday's report adding 19,440 gifts totaling $154,086.26 and loudly agreed to increase that figure at Monday's meeting. There will be no meeting today and week-end efforts will be concentrated on a determined drive to "go over the top."

Peace Restored at G. U., Maryland Campuses After Pre-Game Clash Between Students

An olive branch yesterday was the aftermath of the first round of the student skirmish preliminary to the Georgetown-Maryland football game, with the dove of peace appearing in her purest plumage.

Warring factions of students agreed yesterday to pay their respective bills. Furthermore, Georgetown extended an invitation to Maryland to attend a student dance, held last night in a downtown hotel.

But, in case war clouds reappear as a result of Thursday night's demonstration, officials prepared to meet any emergency which might arise from the vote of Georgetown students to seize Maryland's goal posts in event of victory, and the Terrapin vow to keep them, win, lose or draw.

Trouble began Thursday night when some Georgetown men visited the Maryland campus. Bent on reprisal, 50 Maryland undergraduates were detained at the Seventh Precinct Station.

The only casualty of the evening was the bronze terrapin of Ritchie Coliseum, at College Park, which was daubed with blue and gray paint, his head topped with white.

Ominous warnings also appeared on the doors of the coliseum. They were no more fearsome, however, than those painted on the streets around Georgetown.

Other developments included such pranks as detention of two Marylanders in a Georgetown dormitory, upon whose chests were painted "Hoya" and "Saxa." They were returned to their campus in a taxi.

The Georgetown boys went romantic, and serenaded the co-eds in Maryland's Margaret Brent Hall.

At this point a mere freshman co-ed, Virginia Long, who earlier in the year had shattered precedent by gaining admittance to the school band, leaned from the window and played Maryland's victory song on her cornet.

The serenaders fled.

And to make matters merrier, the Hoyas polished it all off by visiting Catholic University, where the Cardinals opened their windows and drenched them with water from 20 fire extinguishers.

mism and urged a spirit of confidence in the final drive.

As yesterday's guest speaker, Bishop aJmes E. Freeman commended the workers for their "splendid spirit" and urged them to "go out to this community with freshened zeal and attack the problem which so vitally affects it."

"Defy all alibis," Bishop Freeman said. "Force the issue. Don't let it be said that Washington will fail. The people have been sluggish in coming to the Chest's aid, but they must realize what is at stake and give all they can—willingly and without solicitation."

As he spoke over a radio hook-up of the National Broadcasting Co., Bishop Freeman described the huge luncheon gathering and told his listeners what was being done to make the campaign a success.

"We are facing hard, cold and bitter facts," he said. "We must arrest the forces which are attempting to overthrow the principles of life."

Marvin McIntyre, of the President's secretarial staff, represented the White House at yesterday's meeting. He heard Chairman Jennings tell the workers that recent pleas had brought increased gift pledges—necessary if the campaign is going over.

Units Report.

Special assignments—28 gifts totaling $18,132. To date: 547 gifts totaling $482,898. 85.34 per cent of quota.

Man Hit by Trolley Dies; Toll Now 77

The seventy-seventh traffic fatality of this year was recorded Thursday with the death, in Casualty Hospital, of Stephen Queen, 49, of 408 Fifty-eighth street northeast.

Queen was struck by a street car at Sixtieth and Dix streets northeast November 11. He was taken to Casualty Hospital and treated for a broken left jaw, possible fracture of the skull, fractured leg and hand and possible internal injuries.

Wilbur Shoemaker, 29, of 1111 Staples street northeast, was motorman of the car, police said.

Oscar Chadwick, 409 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and Enrico Renzi, 621 F street northeast, passengers in Jones' car, escaped with minor injuries.

Supreme Court Ponders U. S. Neutrality Case as War Clouds Threaten Europe.

By Franklyn Waltman

WITH war clouds hanging low over Europe, the Supreme Court has taken under advisement a case which, when decided, may have a material bearing on further efforts by Congress to clothe the President with authority designed to preserve the neutrality of the United States.

WALTMAN.

On the high tribunal's decision in this case may depend the validity of the existing neutrality act which expires next May 1, and certainly whatever the Court says in its decision in this case will have a marked influence on the type of neutrality legislation which Congress will adopt this winter.

Already one of the most complicated and difficult problems to confront Congress in many years, maintenance of American neutrality by preventive legislation may be now further complicated by legalistic aspects growing out of the system of checks and balances between executive and legislative branches of government imposed by the Constitution.

The essence of sound neutrality legislation should be the investment of the President with wide discretionary power which would enable him to act wisely whatever international contingency may arise. A law too rigid and mandatory may do far more damage than good. But the other danger in this Scylla and Charybdis is that if the President is given too free a hand such legislation becomes unconstitutional because of an improper delegation of legislative authority.

Although Congress from the beginning of the Government (the first act of this kind was enacted in 1794) has conferred on the President certain discretionary powers in declaring and lifting embargoes, the Supreme Court has never clearly charted the limitations which must surround such delegations of power. Thus the current case has an importance and significance more than transitory—the decision on it may well turn out to be the most important of this term of the high tribunal.

The case in which the Supreme Court has just heard arguments grows out of a criminal charge for a conspiracy to violate the joint resolution of May 28, 1934, empowering the President to forbid arms and munitions sales to Paraguay and Bolivia in the recent Gran Chaco warfare. An indictment was returned by the Federal grand jury for the Southern district of New York, charging the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation and five other defendants with selling 15 machine guns to Bolivia in violation of that prohibition.

The defendants demurred to the indictment on several grounds, but chiefly that the joint resolution conferred on the President "unfettered discretion," leaving it optional with him to issue a proclamation making the prohibition against arms sales effective and failing to specify adequately the standard which should govern the President's action. This demurrer was sustained.

The Government appealed the decision to the Supreme Court declaring that "if upheld it will operate to nullify in large part the laws enacted by Congress to preserve American neutrality." Citing the high tribunal's ruling in the flexible tariff clause case and in various I. C. C. rate cases, and calling attention to a long list of similar enactments, the Government held that Congress had not improperly delegated its authority, doing no more than empowering the President to make a legislative enactment effective when he determined the existence of some fact or state of things.

The terminology of the 1934 resolution, however, became a bone of contention in the arguments before the Supreme Court. It provided that "if the President finds that the prohibition of the sale of arms and munitions of war in the United States to those countries now engaged in armed conflict in the Chaco may contribute to the re-establishment of peace between those countries" and he makes proclamation to that effect, then "it shall be unlawful" to sell arms to those countries.

Counsel for the defendants contended that the President could not make a precise finding of fact under the language of this resolution, since it called on him to determine a future consummation, that is, whether his action would "contribute to the re-establishment of peace."

In 1912, Congress sought to give the President similiar authority by making his action contingent on a finding that conditions of domestic violence in American countries "are promoted by the use of arms and munitions procured from the United States." In that case, it was argued, the Presidential authority rested on finding "an existing condition of facts," rather than a future condition, causing Justice McReynolds to ask how the latter "can be more than a guess."

Although by amendment last February the discretionary power of the President under the existing neutrality resolution was somewhat restricted when compared with the previous authority granted him, the present statute still leaves him a wide discretion in acting.

The resolution provides that "whenever the President shall find that there exists a state of war between, or among two or more foreign states, the President shall proclaim such fact" and thereafter the prohibition against shipment of the arms and munitions enumerated by him and in certain other respects, such as credit, shall become effective.

The determination of what constitutes "a state of war" is left wholly to the President's discretion and it is possible for him to ignore any conflict in which an actual declaration of war has not been made. It is on this point, if any, that the existing law is feared to be vulnerable. But the Supreme Court may make a distinction between delegations of authority cognate to the conduct by the President of foreign relations of the Government and delegations of power in solely domestic matters.

'Taps' Requiem Of Opera Star Veterans Loved

Mme. Schumann-Heink Is Given Military Rites by Coast Legion.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Nov. 20.—The clear, swelling strains of an Army bugle called "Taps" today for Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink.

This was requiem for the great singer, the last sad note of her funeral, conducted by the American Legion in the Hollywood Post auditorium. She died Tuesday night, after a lingering illness. She was 75.

The legionnaires, only a few hundred of the thousands she called "My soldier boys," accorded her full military honors in a brief service. Invocation was by Hjalmar Carlson, post chaplain. Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin delivered the eulogy.

He touched on her World War record, describing her grief and bewilderment, her divided allegiance to her sons who were wearing both the German and the American army uniforms, and of her unbounded love for all soldiers of all nations.

"She saw them, not as fighting men," Rabbi Magnin continued, "but as mere boys, taken from their mothers and wives and families to meet what was for each of them a great crisis.

"She loved them all, white and black, American and European, Jew and gentile. In this she showed herself a master in the greatest of all arts—the art of living. She was a Meistersinger, a master artist."

When he finished, the Army call to sleep floated across the auditorium.

The body was taken to San Diego for cremation in the city where Mme. Schumann-Heink had made her home.

U. S. Ignores Notice Of Spanish Rebels

By the Associated Press.

The United States last night ignored an indirect warning from the Spanish insurgent command that it intended to close the port of Barcelona to American and other foreign ships.

High State Department officials emphasized, however, that this Government's refusal to take formal notice of the communication meant no tacit recognition of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's right to take such action.

R. Walton Moore, acting secretary of state, asserted at a press conference that the warning came in such a roundabout manner as to warrant no rejoinder and that no American commercial or naval vessels were in the Barcelona area.

Information in the hands of department officials is that American shipping is carefully avoiding Spanish waters.

Wife Gets Decree As Movie Reveals 'Dead' Mate Alive

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—An actress who went to the movies with her second mate and saw the husband she thought dead on the screen won an annulment of marriage No. 2 today.

Bobbette Murray Griffin, 24, testified it all happened this way:

She married Thomas W. Murray in 1929 in New York when they were employed in Long Island studios. They separated in 1931.

"In 1933 the papers carried his name as one of those killed in the Los Angeles quake," she said. "I went into mourning."

Last July she married Joseph D. Griffin, an office manager, in Washington, D. C. They went to a movie ("The Great Ziegfeld") on August 1. Murray appeared on the screen.

"I was shocked," she said. "I called Murray in Hollywood. I left Washington that night."

So Superior Judge J. C. Lewe granted the decree.

Mrs. Griffin said she would divorce Murray and remarry Griffin "if he still wants me."

Man Held for Jury In Death of Mother

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 20 (AP).—Magistrate O. M. Phipps today ordered Charles B. Baldwin, 41-year-old former coal operator, held to the grand jury on a charge of slaying his socially prominent mother, Mrs. Juliette B. Enslow, 63.

John H. Meek, Baldwin's counsel, said no application for bond "will be made within the immediate future."

The Army Air Corps captain has been held in the county jail since a week after his wealthy mother was found beaten and strangled beside her bed.

Hillman Union Is Target; Labor Board Member Urges Amendment.

Government," Smith emphasized, "is large enough to meet the opposition to liberal legislation and to forceful administration of such legislation which certain private interests will muster in the future as they have done in the past.

"I think that labor will see that an amendment or amendments to the Constitution, broad enough to permit Congressional action of the sort which labor needs and the country demands, is put in the forefront of its activities in the year ahead. By the aid of such a Constitutional amendment, labor can confidently expect to struggle successfully toward a more secure and beneficient future."

Green Applauded

Delegates stamped, applauded and whistled as President William Green roared a sharp denunciation of Fascism, Nazism and all dictatorships.

Green spoke in reply to messages from fraternal delegates from Great Britain and Canada, who appealed to organized labor's rank and file to wage an unceasing battle to preserve the freedom won by the founding fathers.

George Gibson, delegate from England, said the spectre of dictatorship overshadows all today in Europe. From the Baltic, to the Black Sea, he said, there exists a solid wedge of Fascism in one or another of its several forms. British trade unionists, he said, are pacifists and would support no British government in a war of aggression.

"But," he continued, "there is one thing that British trade unionism is prepared to fight for—freedom. We shall fight, if necessary, for liberty and freedom whether it is menaced by our own or by foreign governments."

The operations of the Social Security Act were explained to the delegates by Acting Chairman A. J. Altmeyer, jr., of the Social Security Board. He gave labor credit for defeating the Republican attacks upon the Social Security Act during the recent Presidential campaign. Altmeyer insisted it was given careful study by social experts before enactment.

Boost in Taxes Is Unnecessary, Harrison Says

Doughton Declares Present Law Will Be Revised if Advisable.

He favors giving further relief to debt-ridden corporations and companies unable to meet obligations, and possibly new provisions to encourage modernization and rebuilding of plants, he said.

This would be in line with recommendations frequently made by Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. In a recent radio address, Jones intimated such modifications have Presidential support.

Harrison said yesterday any such changes, if made, will not apply retroactively to collections for the present year.

"Naturally, inequities will creep into any system of taxation when it is first established, and these must be eliminated whenever they are shown up by actual experience," he told reporters.

He said the undistributed earnings levies, becoming effective the first of the year, as yet had no basis in experience, and he believed Congress should first "find out how it works."

Says Tax Is Sound.

"I have no doubt that this tax is sound," he said. "It has had its influence in the recent wage increases, and it has added to the purchasing power of the American people by forcing some companies to disgorge their dividends."

Harrison favored a "rational decrease" in Federal spending and curtailment of some of the Government's emergency activities. He said there is strong opposition in Congress to further expansion in the emergency setup.

"Any extension of the Government's activities will be scrutinized most carefully and granted grudgingly," he said.

The Senate Finance chairman said he thought all but a few of the existing "nuisance" taxes must be retained "if we are to get a balanced budget as soon as possible." He said tax revenues are "picking up faster than we had expected" and a balanced budget is "rapidly being approached."

Both Harrison and Doughton bluntly opposed any drastic changes in the social security act. Harrison said he thought organized labor's drive to eliminate the social security tax on employes has little chance of success. In his opinion, only minor changes will be made in that law, with possibility some provision in aid of States unable to meet requirements under the needy old age retirement provisions.

Doughton struck sharply at critics of the social security law.

"No bill during my service on the Ways and Means committee has been more carefully considered," he said. "We approved this measure confident in our own minds that it was the best law which could be drafted to meet the social security problem. As yet no evidence has been presented which has caused me to change my mind."

As Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell slashed away at a 1938 budget expected to mark a turning point in New Deal outlays, rigid retrenchment in emergency agencies and a scaling off in relief spending, officials pointed optimistically to a narrowing gap between current expenditures and revenues.

But spending still is far in excess of income. Outlays for the current fiscal year to date are $2,691,558,000, against $2,960,587,000 for the same period last year. Total expenditures for the fiscal year 1936 were $8,679,798,000, compared with $7,375,357,000 in 1935, but the 1936 figure included the bonus. Revenues for the current fiscal year, from July 1 through November 18, were $1,552,989,000, an increase of $155,454,000 for the same period last year.

Father, Ill, Asks Daughter's Return

Seriously ill of bronchial double pneumonia in Gallinger Hospital, a father yesterday made a plea for his daughter, Mrs. Anastasia Wright, 22, of 132 Eleventh street southeast, missing for several days, to return home.

From his bed in the hospital Charles Smith, of 1440 Oak street northwest, requested police to do all in their power to help locate his daughter. The report that she was missing was made by her husband, Lester, employed as a restaurant counterman.

Police who have been investigatnig the case learned that Mrs. Wright had told friends before she disappeared last Tuesday that she was thinking of taking a trip to Florida. She was described as attractive, having red hair, Blue eyes and is about 5 feet 5 inches tall. When she left home she had on a blue coat and a black dress.

Millers Guilty on Charges of Housebreaking in Montgomery Court.

Two Washington brothers, one an employe of the Traffic Bureau, were sentenced on housebreaking charges to serve two years and six months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday by Judges Arthur D. Willard and Charles W. Woodward in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

The brothers entered a plea of guilty. They were arrested November 9 by Sergt. Earl H. Burdine and County Policeman Leo Day shortly after the policemen had received a call that two men had broken into the home of Mrs. R. Hanson Weightman, in Bethesda.

John N. Miller, 29, gave his occupation as file clerk in the Traffic Bureau in Washington. His brother, George E. Miller, 24, was captured by Day after the policeman had fired a shot at him in the course of a foot race. In sentencing them, Judge Woodward said that breaking into a residence was even more serious than into a business establishment.

Blondel Elmo Redmond, former theater usher in Washington, was sentenced to serve two years and six months for theft of jewelry valued at $400 from his host, Warren Gingell, of Bethesda, Md.

Bigamist Sentenced.

Milne Swann, colored, convicted of bigamy, was sentenced to serve one year in the House of Correction in spite of the plea of his attorney, F. Barnard Welsh, that standards of marriage are not the same amongst the colored people as among the white race.

"That might apply to a good many colored persons, but not to this youth," the judge replied. "He comes from as high a class of colored people as there is in this county. His father is a minister and his mother a school teacher and he has had a good education. He knew he was doing wrong."

Leroy Smith and George Keith, both colored, were sentenced to serve two years and six months, and Edgar White, also colored, to serve 18 months in the House of Correction for housebreaking and larceny. White did not enter the store that was robbed, but took part in the division of spoils, it was explained.

Roosevelt Jackson, colored, was sentenced to serve 18 months in the House of Correction for manslaughter. He was operator of an automobile which collided with a sod truck causing fatal injuries to Robert Hebron, colored.

Ann Doye, colored, was sentenced to serve 60 days in the county jail for forgery and uttering. The judge said her previous good record had been taken into account in giving her the light sentence.

Others sentenced were Fred Skagen, larceny, 12 months, House of Correction; Frank Rees, larceny, 18 month, House of Correction; George F. Moore, bigamy, one year, House of Correction; Thomas Parker, colored, statutory offense, 12 months in the House of Correction; Lewis Dixon, colored, statutory offense, 18 months in the House of Correction.

Sulu Sultan Dies; Successor Dubious

Manila, Nov. 20 (AP).—Advices from Jolo tonight reported the unexpected death of the newly installed Sultan of Sulu and returned to the limelight his powerful rival, the vivacious Princess Dayang Dayang, who contested his right to the throne.

The dispatches said the 40-year-old princess personally advised the provincial governor of Sulu of the death and joined him and the district health officer in a quick trip to the palace at Maimbung to determine the cause.

The death took warlike Moroland by surprise because the sultan, Mawallil Wassit, was about to appear in court regarding the opening of the will of the old Sultan Jamalul Kiram, who died last June. Mawallil was crowned sultan July 17.

Complicating the situation was a general belief the reading of the will might have some bearing on the succession, which involves a measure of spiritual leadership over 500,000 primitive Mohammedans who never have discarded their inclination to fight.

250 Feared Dead In Japanese Flood

Osarusawa, Japan, Nov. 20 (AP).—The bodies of untold hundreds of missing residents of this flood-smashed mining town were sought by 3,000 rescue workers tonight.

Eighty bodies had been recovered by nightfall. The known dead was placed at 250. At least 1,000 others were missing. Only 18 survivors could be found.

Some of the bodies were dug from 20 feet of muck—the residue left by a roaring wall of water which swept down on the sleeping village from a copper mine reservoir that burst its barriers high above the town.

Labor Support Of Constitution Changes Urged

Federation Warned Social Security Program in Danger of Defeat.

By the Associated Press.

The proposal of Edwin F. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, for a constitutional amendment to attain New Deal objectives won a measure of support yesterday from several Senators.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, asserted that "it is entirely possible that some such step may prove necessary."

He expressed himself as "strongly in favor" of a constitutional amendment authorizing the Government to set minimum wage and labor standards, if such a goal could be obtained in no other way.

A prediction that the forthcoming Congress would be forced to consider amending the Constitution was made by Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, who introduced a proposed amendment during the last session.

"I think the step must be taken eventually," he said, "and I believe that an amendment is the only proper way to accomplish many of the New Deal aims."

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, said he believed Federal regulation of labor conditions could be accomplished without amending the Constitution, by means of a system of Government licenses for corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

He is drafting such a measure.

Fishermen Adrift On Lake Ice Floe

Winnipeg, Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—Trapped on floating ice fields, an undetermined number of fishermen were in perilous positions in Lake Manitoba tonight after 75 other men had been rescued from a similar situation.

Fifty fishermen adrift in the northern part of stormy Lake Dauphin at a point about 275 miles northwest of Winnipeg were rescued. In Lake Manitoba, a larger body of water to the east, an unknown number was adrift off Oak Point, 85 miles northwest of here.

Sleet and snow storms made rescue work difficult.

Owners Reject New Peace Bid In Ocean Strike

McGrady's Neutral Committee Proposal Fails; New Effort Planned.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 20.—Another Labor Department attempt to bring about resumption of maritime strike peace negotiations failed tonight when employers announced rejection of a proposal which would have provided "neutral port committees" for settlement of individual controversies between ship owners and unions.

The plan was advanced by Assistant Labor Secretary Edward F. McGrady.

McGrady said he would confer tomorrow with representatives of the licensed officers' unions in an attempt to approach the problem from a new angle.

Settlement of two other strikes brightened the Far West labor picture somewhat, but a dozen or so controversies involving walkouts of warehousemen, textile workers and shipyard men continued.

Unions and employers met in an attempt to avert a scheduled strike vote of 2,000 San Francisco laundry workers.

In Washington, the Interior Department asked the use of Navy transports to carry emergency food supplies to strike-affected Hawaii, and Col. O. F. Ohlson, manager of the Government-owned Alaska Railroad, left for San Francisco to charter ships for movement of emergency supplies to the northern territory.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—A crowd of insurgent strikers estimated by police at 1,000 attempted to storm the lower Manhattan meeting hall of the International Seamen's Union late today, but was barred from the building by special guards.

About 30 of the strikers broke through a side door, but were routed by police.

With their fellows, they paraded in front of the building waving union books showing they were paid-up members of the I. S. U., which has refused to countenance the strike led by Joseph Curran.

Russian Plot Laid To Trotzky, Nazis

Novosibirsk, Western Siberia, Nov. 20 (AP).—Testimony that German Nazis and the exiled Bolshevist Leon Trotzky plotted to wreck the great Kamerovo coal mines was given today at the trial of eight men who confessed to acts of sabotage in which 14 miners were killed.

Witnesses testified the "terrorist group," through one of the defendants, E. Stickling, a German engineer, included Trotzkyists and Nazis who sought to introduce Fascism into the U. S. S. R. and restore capitalism.

The defendants also attempted to undermine the Stakhanovite (speedup) movement, said one of the prisoners, M. Noskoff, had released poisonous gases in the mine shaft to kill miners.

Washingtonians want this law repealed."

Declaring Washington's 2,700 public school teachers are working under "almost insuperable educational conditions," Dr. Fitzpatrick added:

"Harassed by a stupid law, they are perplexed and bewildered. Fear perforce follows in the footsteps of this intellectual shackle.

"Develops Morbid Interest."

"Instead of avoiding discussions of Communism, the school children have developed a morbid interest in the subject. In place of a supervised course of training in their classrooms that are assimilating distortions and half-truths on the streets and from books and pamphlets giving only one side of the picture.

Representatives of the League of Women Voters from Richmond and Baltimore attended the session of the local organization, in which the red rider was discussed. Mrs. William E. Kittle, president of the District league, said repeal of the red rider has been listed as one of the major objectives on the league's 1937 legislative calendar.

Mrs. Chapin recited the history of the rider, asserting it was slipped through without debate as a conference amendment to the District appropriations bill. She told how efforts to repeal the rider were defeated by parliamentary tactics of its supporters at the last session of Congress. Other bills behind which the league is throwing its full support are the 40-hour week for women measure and the bill to allow the District national representation.

2 Marines Die In Plane Crash As Motor Fails

Bomber Plunges to Earth at Chesapeake Beach as Pupils Look On.

A United States Marine Corps bombing plane from Quantico, Va., crashed yesterday near Chesapeake Beach, Md., killing Lieut. Cleo R. Keen and Sergt. Frank P. M. Eagan.

The crash at Friendship, in southern Anne Arundel County, occurred in sight of pupils at Southern High School who saw the plane wobble and falter and then crash on the Mary Estep farm.

Marine officials said the plane was on a routine training flight and that Lieut. Keen and Sergt. Eagan were attached to the First Brigade of the Fleet Marine Force at Quantico.

Pinned in Wreckage.

The plane did not catch fire after the crash. Bodies of both men were mangled almost beyond recognition and one had to be cut from the wreckage with a blow torch.

Robert Stull, a teacher in the school, was first to reach the plane. He said both men apparently died instantaneously.

"I was in the school building when the plane passed over, flying toward the southeast. It was flying low. I would say about 100 feet, and seemed to be having motor trouble. I heard the motor falter. Then it seemed to stop short," Stull said.

Ship Nose-Dived.

"It passed over a couple of fields and then suddenly turned over and nose-dived. When I reached the field I saw the motor had gone into the ground and had been pushed back into the first cockpit. The man in the first cockpit had been killed by the motor. The man in the second cockpit was dead, too.'

First Lieut. Keen, who was unmarried, graduated from the Naval Academy in 1932. He was born in Moberly, Mo., November 17, 1909. He qualified as an aviator last April. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Keen, live at Moberly.

Sergt. Eagan enlisted in the corps in 1922. He is listed in Marine records as 155 Geneva avenue, Dorchester, Mass.

Both bodies were taken to the Naval Academy Hospital, Annapolis.

Nazi Submarine Sinks; 8 Drowned

Berlin, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Eight persons were drowned to day when a German submarine, the U-18, sank as a result of a collision with another ship during gunnery practice off Luebeck. Twelve of the crew were rescued.

Bryan Untiedt Quits As Legislative Page

Denver, Nov. 20 (AP).—Bryan Untiedt, 18, hero of the Tower, Colo., school bus tragedy in 1931, took a permanent job with a packing company today, quitting his work as a page in the Legislature after two days.

"I guess I'm not cut out for inside work," he said, "I like to be outdoors."

Untiedt was credited with saving 15 children from freezing when a blizzard trapped their school bus. Five others froze to death.

Officer at Quantico Gets Gun for Wildcats

By the Associated Press.

A housing shortage and trouble with wildcats were wrapped up together in a terse report yesterday to the Navy Deparmtent from the Ordnance Officer at the Quantico (Va.) Marine Base.

The report said a senior non-commissioned offifficer unnamed, requested a .22 calibre rifle because lack of quarters at the post or in the town forced him to live "so far back in the Virginia hills that the wildcats constituted a menace to his chickens, and besides, his children liked to play in the woods."

He got the rifle.

Meet Today to Decide Model Plane Contest

Some 50 models have been entered in the District Model Aircraft League's indoor tournament, second half of the contest to determine the District champion, which will be held at 9 a. m. today in Constitution Hall.

The tournament opened November 7 at Fort Myer when a number of the District's young aviation enthusiasts competed in three outdoor classes. Points scored at that date will be totaled with those made today in deciding the winner of the championship trophy.

Finland to Pay Debt Installment to U. S.

Helsingfors, Finland, Nov. 20 (AP). Finland will pay her war debt installment due the United States December 15, authoritative sources said today.

The small Baltic nation is the only debtor which has not defaulted on its obligations to the United States.

Angry Woman Breaks U. S. Embassy Window

London, Nov. 20 (AP).—Edwina Thompson, 32, said in police court today she had a grievance against the British foreign office so, for some reason, she tossed a flatiron through a plate glass window of the United States Embassy.

The woman would not say why she chose the American Embassy, but said she decided on the act because of a British "frame-up" against her four years ago. She was remanded for investigation.

Von Ossietzky Feared Dying of Tuberculosis

Berlin, Nov. 20 (AP).—Friends of Karl von Ossietzky, German pacifist mentioned for the Nobel peace prize, said tonight he was suffering from incurable tuberculosis at a private sanitarium here. They feared he might die at any moment.

Judge Defends Action Refusing O'Shea Release

McMahon Cites Prisoner's Medical Record in Answering Suit.

Defending his refusal to permit the release from Occoquan of Thomas O'Shea, serving 180 days for intoxication, John P. McMahon, presiding judge of the Police Court yesterday denied he had acted "arbitrarily or capriciously" when he held up O'Shea's release papers.

Suit to compel Judge McMahon to approve O'Shea's release was brought by Attorneys James Shenos and George Boden. They contended Judge Robert E. Mattingly, the committing magistrate, had penciled a memorandum on the court record suggesting the advisability of releasing O'Shea because of suspected tubercular trouble.

The notation was ignored and O'Shea was kept in Occoquan. The attorneys then moved to compel issuance of release papers, naming Judge McMahon and the clerk of the court as defendants.

In his answer yesterday, Judge McMahon said, through John W. Fihelly, Assistant United States Attorney, that O'Shea had been kept in the infirmary for three days, that he was pronounced free of tuberculosis, and that since then, working on the farm, he had gained three and a half pounds.

He contended he was within his rights in refusing to permit O'Shea to leave the prison and asked dismissal of the "mandasmus." Action on his motion will be taken next week.

D. C. Vocational Staffs To Seek Aid at Parley

Aid of the American Vocational Association convention will be sought in Texas next month by the District Association for the 17 vocational school teachers who recently were denied salary increases because they lacked "paper" qualifications.

At its last meeting the local association appointed a special committee to draft a resolution calling upon the convention to support the 17 teachers. E. J. Murphy was re-elected president.

Canadian Fishermen Reported Adrift on Ice

Winnipeg, Nov. 20 (Canadian Press). — Twenty-five fishermen were reported adrift today on an ice floe in Lake Dauphin, in northwestern Manitoba. The report said the floe was being driven out into the lake by strong westerly winds.

Other unconfirmed reports said another group of fishermen was stranded on a floating field of ice in Lake Manitoba.

Youth Arrested While Watching Suspect Blazes

Prisoner Denies He Set 5 Fires in Row, Though Present at Each.

A 24-year-old colored Government employe was being held last night at the Second Precinct Station suspected of starting five fires in the Northwest section.

Firemen spent one of the busiest nights in recent years, between midnight and 3:30 a. m. yesterday, putting out blaze in nine wood sheds, a garage and a lodging house. The suspect was arrested when firemen noticed he was at the scene of every fire.

When booked for investigation he told police he wanted to become a fireman. His excuse, police said, for being at all the fires was that he was sitting up with a sick child and that all were near his home.

A near panic was created at one fire in the 400 block of N street northwest, in the National Hotel, a frame lodging house, housing nearly 60 colored persons.

Firemen arrived and found narrow wooden porch steps ablaze. The occupants were crowding windows and yelling that they would jump. Firemen calmed the occupants while others extinguished the flaming steps.

Within two hours after the N street blaze, four fires broke out in the vicinity. Three sheds in the rear of 907 to 911 Q street northwest were destroyed. A shed and garage housing a new car went up in flames at 1724 Seventh street, five minutes later.

Three sheds in the 1600 block of New Jersey avenue and one at 428 R street northwest were afire at one time just an hour after the first alarm was pulled. Firemen said evidence that gasoline was used to start the first three fires was found.

Ten minutes after firefighters had extinguished the blaze in the National Hotel, they were called back to put out two flaming sheds next to the lodging house.

Blind 20 Years, Girl's Vision Is Returning

Helena, Ark., Nov. 20 (AP).—Blind for 20 years, Miss Jane Borsh, 25, student at Arkansas State College, was experiencing returning vision today through processes which physicians could not explain. Miss Borsch became blind at the age of 5 after a serious illness.

Her aunt Mrs. Leo Oenning, said the transition back to sight started without treatment two weeks ago.

New Highs Set In Auto Sales At 17th Show

Annual Display Will Close Tonight; Dealers Look for Record Season.

The traditional blowing of new car horns by exhibitiors will signify the close of Washington's seventeenth annual Automobile Show tonight at 11 o'clock in Calvert Exhibit Hall, 2701 Calvert street northwest.

From a buying standpoint, the show, which opened last Saturday, has been the most successful in the history of the Capital's automotive industry, automobile authorities stated.

The attendance also has exceeded expectations, it being estimated that approximately 40 per cent larger crowds have attended the show this year than in 1935.

With a more than idly interested public keeping salesmen busy throughout the week filling out order blanks and scheduling demonstrations, officials reiterated beliefs that sales for the remainder of this year will send the total far above last year.

The number of new passenger cars sold in Washington in 1935 was 28,539, some 5,000 being sold during the last two months of the year. Before the show opened this year, 27,600 automobiles had been purchased, and on the basis that sales for the balance of the year will be at least as good as last year, it is estimated the total will be more than 32,000.

The doors will open for the final day today at 11 a. m.

Boy Tells of Beating While Hung on Rafters

Klamath Falls, Oreg., Nov. 20 (AP). Twelve-year-old Wallace Larue's story that he had been handcuffed, hung by his arms from the rafters of a shack and beaten resulted today in the arrest of J. C. Tidwell 33, a restaurant dishwasher, and Mrs. Agnes Larue, 31, the mother.

Tidwell and Mrs. Larue were held in jail, Tidwell on charges of mistreating a child, Mrs. Larue on a morals count. The boy's father signed both complaints.

The boy was quoted that he was punished "for going downtown when I wasn't supposed to."

Trial Is Set Jan. 18 For Edward Peter

Judges of the Montgomery County Circuit Court yesterday set January 18 as the date for the trial of Edward Peter, former counsel of Montgomery County Commissioners, and former Fusion Party leader, on indictments charging false pretenses, larceny and embezzlement of $15,000 in county funds.

The attorney, a member of one of Rockville's oldest and most prominent families will be tried on three indictments, one of ten counts charging larceny, one with ten counts charing false pretenses and one charging one count of embezzlement.

The State will charge Peter failed to account for about $15,000 in funds used in connection with the widening of Wisconsin avenue.

Soviet Warns Tokyo Against Pact With Reich

Reported Military Alliance Will Strain Relations, Moscow Says.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 20.—Russia tonight told Japan a German-Japanese pact would strain Soviet relations with Tokyo.

The Russian warning concerned what the Soviets previously asserted was a military alliance between Germany and Japan directed against Russia.

(Neither Japan nor Germany acknowledged the Russian-reported pact, while Chinese described an anticommunism accord between Japan and Germany.)

Japanese "explanations" of the asserted accord were "unsatisfactory," the Russian government said, with result that relations between the two nations might be "seriously harmed."

The communique announcing these developments was made public after Dr. Constantine Youreneff, the Russian Ambassador, called upon Japanese Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita at Tokyo and demanded confirmation or denial of such a treaty.

The text of the communique, credited to the Tass Official (Russian) News Agency, said:

"Youreneff explained that according to the opinion of the Soviet government it was difficult to admit that the German government would need the assistance of the Japanese 'police' for their struggle against communism in their own country; nor would the Japanese government need help from the German government for a similar struggle.

"An international agreement would be needed for this purpose. Comrade Youreneff also added that the agreement for the struggle against communism was only a cover for another Japanese-German agreement against an undisclosed third country.

"He was authorized to declare that such an agreement will harm seriously Soviet-Japanese relations. Arita avoided giving a direct answer."

Berlin Reiterates Denial.

Berlin, Nov. 20 (AP).—Russia's warning that a Japanese-German agreement would "seriously harm" Moscow's relations with Tokyo evoked a German foreign office statement today that "nothing has changed since our last denial that such an agreement existed."

Court Refuses to Act In Rail Delivery Case

New York, Nov. 20 (AP)—While reserving decision on the question of its jurisdiction, a special Federal statutory court today indicated it would not interfere with the store-door delivery service instituted by Eastern railroads on November 16.

Presiding Judge Thomas W. Swan said that even if the court found it had jurisdiction, it probably would deny an application by the Master Truckmen of America for an order restraining the railroads and the Interstate Commerce Commission from putting the store-door delivery rates into effect.

Stanford and California Alumni to Hear Game

Under a flag of truce, more than 500 alumni of Stanford University and the University of California will meet at the Racquet Club this afternoon to listen to radio reports of the annual "Big Game" between football teams of the alma maters.

So fiercely partisan have become the student bodies and undergraduates of the two schools that police each year take special pracautions to prevent a riot. Racquet Club officials, however, have been assured the truce effected between the two alumni associations will be observed today.

England's Divorce Proctor a 'Farce,' Woman M. P. Says

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—In outspoken attack on British divorce laws, Mrs. Mavis Constance Tate, Conservative member of Parliament, told the House of Commons today the office of King's Proctor was a "farce."

Startled members of the House murmured ejaculations of "hear! hear!" as Mrs. Tate directed her fire at the royal official—theoretically the "keyhole" supervisor of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson's conduct until her divorce decree becomes final.

"People who are getting a divorce by mutual consent are using the cloak of adultery to get it," she declared.

"The King's Proctor is a farce. He only intervenes when he receives an overwhelming number of anonymous letters."

(The duty of the King's Proctor, under British divorce law, is to watch over private conduct of divorced parties in the six-months period before the decree can become final.)

Dr. Wilkinson Named Rector At St. Thomas'

Garden City, L. I., Clergyman Will Succeed Dr. C. E. Smith.

The Rev. Howard Sargent Wilkinson, D. D., of the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, Long Island, was announced yesterday as new rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Eighteenth and Church streets northwest, the church attended by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

In announcing the selection of Dr. Wilkinson the wardens and vestrymen of the congregation concluded a many months' search for a leader to succeed the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, D. D., retired. The new rector, a clergyman of national prominence, expects to take up his duties in Washington December 15, will preach his first sermon on December 20 and will conduct special services planned for Christmas.

Dr. Wilkinson has spent most of his time, both as a student of theology and as a preacher, in New England. However, he received bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., before he studied sacred theology at Boston University. For his bachelor of divinity degree he went to the Episcopal Theological School and received his doctorate in divinity at the University of California.

After his ordination he began his ministerial career as rector of St. Paul's Church, New Haven, Conn. Later he became rector of Emmanuel Church at West Roxbury, Boston. He received high commendation for his work in the Boston police strike of the early 1920's.

Dr. Wilkinson's wife was formerly Helen Adams Treadwell, of Brookline, Mass. She is a graduate of Smith College, as is their only daughter, Madeleine.

Since Dr. Smith's retirement most of the preaching at St. Thomas has been done by the Rt. Rev. Charles Fiske, formerly Bishop of the Diocese of Central New York.

Spanish Checks Traced To Arms Aid Suspect

Bordeaux, France, Nov. 20 (AP).—Police said tonight checks drawn on the Spanish Consulate at Bordeaux were found payable to an engineer under arrest on charges of secretly manufacturing airplane bullets.

Police declined to give further information on the arrest of the engineer, Lucien Bourdale, but said investigation into secret manufacture of arms had spread to Mont de Marsen, Saint Jean de Luz, where various offices were searched.

CattlemenFear End Of Mexico Rancher

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 20 (AP).—American cattlemen—declining to be quoted by name—declared tonight Mexico's new agrarian program may end the vast American cattle industry in that country.

A new Mexican land law providing for the expropriation of private property "for the better distribution of wealth" awaits only the signature of President Lazaro Cardenas to become effective. The measure is designed to convert ranch lands to farming.

As a result, cattlemen said today, some border country ranchers already have sent their families across the boundary and are rounding up their herds for movement to the United States.

They declined use of their names for fear of entanglements of their own affairs.

Rustin to Join In City-Wide Mission Plans

'Lamb of God,' Is Keese's Subject; Newell Will Continue Series.

"The Return to Religion" is Dr. John W. Rustin's sermon subject for services tomorrow morning in Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, which during the day will join in the city-wide Preaching Mission program.

There will be no evening service in the church, as the congregation will attend mission services in Calvary Baptist Church at night.

Metropolitan Memorial M. E. Church. At the morning service the Rev. William Andrew Keese, pastor, will preach on "The Lamb of God." The Student Christian Association of American University will conduct Thanksgiving Vespers in the church vestry at 5 p. m.

Ryland M. E. Church. Continuing his sermons on "Am I in The Way Everlasting?'—A Test," the Rev. Karl G. Newell, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "Do I Feel Basically at Rest?"

Petworth M. E. Church. The Rev. R. L. Wood, pastor, will preach on "I Believe" at 11 a. m. services. Dr. Jesse M. Bader, director of the Preaching Mission, will speak at a sectional meeting in the church at night. Mr. Wood will preside.

Dumbarton M. E. Church. The Rev. Walter Franklin Atkinson, pastor, will speak on "The Voice of History" at 11 a. m. He will speak to the children in their service on the meaning of Thanksgiving. The church will join with other Georgetown churches at preaching mission services at night in Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

Albright Memorial Evangelical Church. The Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor, will preach on "Keeping on Keeping on Forever" at 11 a. m. services.

Wesley M. E. Church. The Rev. J. Luther Neff, pastor, will preach at the morning service on "Seeking God," the second in a series of topics on "God."

Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of the church, is in Chicago speaking on the program of the National Preaching Mission there.

Concordia Lutheran Church. Tomorrow will be observed as Memorial Sunday. Special services will be held to commemorate members and friends who died during the last year. The Rev. Charles Enders will deliver the memorial message in both the German service at 10 a. m. and the English service at 11:15 a. m.

Grace Lutheran Church. Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. services tomorrow on "What Jesus Said About Judgment." The Sunday School will observe Thanksgiving Day with exercises at 9:45 a. m. tomorrow. Members of the school will bring gifts of food and supplies to be distributed to the poor on Thanksgiving Day.

Beth El Dedication Set for Tomorrow

The new Beth El Synagogue, Seventh and Jefferson streets northwest, founded and erected by Rabbi Aaron Volkman, will be dedicated at rites at 6 p. m. tomorrow.

Participating in the ceremonies will be leading figures in the Jewish community. Morris Fleishman and Morris Garfinkel will be co-chairmen of the exercises.

Rabbi Samuel Volkman, of Bnai Jehoshua Temple, Chicago, will join his father in celebrating Beth El's opening. Rabbis of all local synagogues have been invited to attend. The Rev. Louis Novick, of Adas Israel Synagogue, will chant several traditional airs in honor of the new temple.

The new edifice is a three-story structure with a large basement auditorium for classrooms and convocations. The synagogue hall is on the second floor, while the third floor is to be used for private living quarters.

'Soul and Body' Is Scientist Topic

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Matthew vi:22 "The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." (II Corinthians, v:1.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man's individual being can no more die nor disappear in unconsciousness than can soul, for both are immortal" (page 427).

Two Memorials Are Dedicated At Cathedral

Bishop Freeman Presides at Service Unveiling Hildrup Windows.

The recently completed north Transept parclose, or sculptured stone screen, in Washington Cathedral, including two stained glass windows and the stairway leading to the crypt chapels, was formally dedicated yesterday afternoon as a memorial to William Thomas Hildrup, jr., during a brief service conducted by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman.

Mrs. Florence N. Hildrup, of New York City and Harrisburg, Pa., who chose this portion of the fabric as a memorial to her husband, was present with a few intimate friends and members of the Cathedral clergy and lay staff. Music for the service, which immediately followed evensong in the Great Choir, was furnished by the Cathedral boy choir under the direction of Robert G. Barrow.

In summarizing Mr. Hildrup's character, Bishop Freeman quoted the following words from the memorial inscription: "A high exemplar of the Christian virtues, a devout son of the church, a loyal citizen of the State, a patron of the arts, his wife pays loving tribute to his memory in this parclose."

The intricate carving of the cresting, rosettes and delicate open tracery, which distinguished the screen, are made more effective by the two stained glass windows designed and executed by Lawrence Saint, of Huntington Valley, Pa., formerly director of the Washington Cathedral Stained Glass Studio. The symbolic message of the windows is taken from the gospel according to St. John, which was Mr. Hildrup's favorite book in the Bible. They contain eight panels of scenes—the north window representing four statements of Christ about Truth and the south window four instances illustrating a failure in Truth.

The unusual statue entitled "Lincoln in Prayer," placed at the top of the stairway near the memorial inscription, was presented to the Cathedral some time ago by Mrs. Hildrup. It is the work of her late brother, Herbert Houck, of Harrisburg, who conceived the idea of doing President Lincoln in bronze after hearing his father's account of being present when the Gettysburg Address was delivered. So far as the Cathedral authorities know, this is the only statue of Lincoln in an attitude of prayer.

Perkins to Speak On Thankfulness

Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, pastor, will preach on "The Art of Thankfulness" at 11 a. m. services tomorrow in Universalist National Memorial Church.

The Sunday Evening Group will meet in the Weston room for a 6 p. m. supper and a report on the Institute for Social Action, which some of the young people are attending at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church on Tuesday evenings.

All Souls' Unitarian Church. "Speaking foolishly for God" is the subject on which the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Maj. C. I. Kephart, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will speak on "Races of the Biblical Region" at the 10 a. m. meeting of the Comparative Religion Class. Miss Bertie Backus, principal of Alice Deal Junior High, will continue her discussions on character education before the Adult Class in Current Problems, which also meets at 10 o'clock.

Harriet Mercer to Talk.

Rev. Oliver Hart To Preach Twice

St. John's Rector Lauds Duplicate Service.

The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., rector, will preach at the two services in St. John's Episcopal Church tomorrow morning. The first service, at 9:30 a. m., and will consist of Holy Communion and sermon, and the second, at 11 a. m., will include morning prayer and sermon.

Arthur Howes, F. A. G. O., will give a program of organ music at 7:45 p. m. The Rev. James F. Maddison, curate, will preach at evening prayer at 8 o'clock.

The 9:30 a. m. duplicate service, instituted recently, is meeting a community need, Dr. Hart said yesterday. "This service at which the same sermon is preached as at the terday. "This service, at which the seats are free, has been received with enthusiastic approval," said Dr. Hart, "especially so by those whose attendance at the late hour is impossible, and by young married couples who find it most convenient to have church and church school convene at the same hour."

Mission Group To Hold Rites At Cathedral

Bishop Hobson to Preach Sermon; Great Choir Be Utilized.

The Great Choir of Washington Cathedral will be thrown open tomorrow afternoon to the National Preaching Mission, with the Right Rev. Henry Wise Hobson, Bishop of Southern Ohio, delivering the sermon at a popular evangelistic service beginning at 4 o'clock.

This will be one of three mission mass meetings, the others including one at Calvary Baptist Church at 3:30 p. m., and a service for youth only at 7:30 p. m. in National City Christian Church.

As chairman of the Forward Movement Commission in the Protestant Episcopal Church, Bishop Hobson has become an outstanding leader in the field of personal religion. He is one of the youngest bishops in the Episcopal Church, being only 45 years old.

From headquarters of the Forward Movement Commission in Cincinnati, he is leading a Nation-wide crusade among members of the Episcopal Church to develop in them a deeper sense of discipleship.

Music for the Preaching Mission service tomorrow afternoon will be furnished by the Cathedral choir of men and boys under the direction of Robert G. Barrow.

The preacher at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. will be Canon G. Freeland Peter. The usual celebration of the Holy Communion in St. Mary's Chapel will be at 7:30 a. m.

INDIAN MAIDEN TAKES BROADWAY BY STORM

• She was just a fat little squaw when she left Teepee Town . . . But when her sweetheart, Chief Wahoo, arrives in New York to win back her hand and heart, he finds that in six years she has become the glamorous Minnie Ha-Cha, toast of the Great White Way.

• Though she is queen of the night clubs and is being courted by the suave Duke of Burpingham, she still has a lingering fondness for her old friend Chief Wahoo. The rivalry between the rich chieftain and the penniless nobleman is but one of the high points in this new, hilarious and refreshingly original comic strip.

• With Chief Wahoo, Minnie Ha-Cha and the Duke, you will make the acquaintance of J. Mortimer (The Great) Gusto, a lovable showman who has more brass than gold . . . Ammonia, the wooziest equine that ever gnawed a nublin . . . Pigtails, a tomboy who will leap right into your heart . . . Lulu Hipps, the streamlined siren . . . and many other fascinating funny characters.

A New Tone.

The addresses delivered by President Angell of Yale University and Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, at the annual dinner of the New York State Chamber of Commerce were in marked contrast to the kind of discussion characteristic of such gatherings.

Too often business men are inclined to disregard the larger political and social significance of developments that affect their personal fortunes. By training, and sometimes from necessity, they frequently fail to consider those larger issues that concern business in its relation to society.

Dr. Angell and Mr. Aldrich gave their audience a needed warning against this attitude. They called attention to the social and political changes that must be accepted and reckoned with by business in the future. Their advice is not translatable into a definite program of action. It resolves itself into an injunction to avoid the dangers of the reactionary attitude and to show enough enlightened self-interest to make concessions. Thus Dr. Angell pointed out that if we wish to "salvage the high and indubitable advantages of a free democracy," we must voluntarily "forego some of the individual prerogatives which in a simpler day we could properly and successfully claim."

Mr. Aldrich's message was of similar import. He considers that the election was an "American reflection of a world-wide movement that the war and its consequences greatly stimulated"—a movement necessitating yielding up some of the individual's freedom in return for increased social security. This swing away from individualism means, as Mr. Aldrich says, a new conception of the responsibility of each man to consider the effect of his actions upon others. The judgment of men in responsible positions, he concludes, must be governed by a sense of social obligation. That, in his opinion, is the surest way to avoid "the dangers inherent in centralized authority or prescriptive regulation."

That an outstanding leader in the educational field and an equally outstanding banker should be in such substantial agreement as to the course of conduct incumbent upon businessmen is significant. And it is definitely encouraging that both speakers essayed the difficult task of persuading businessmen that it is to their own interest to study and accommodate their policies to irresistible trends instead of blindly opposing them.

An Unsatisfactory Tax.

The enormous list of delinquent taxpayers being compiled by Deputy Tax Collector Russell is a serious reflection upon those Washingtonians who have persistently evaded a basic civic responsibility. But it is a still more serious reflection upon the law which permits such wholesale evasion.

Only 37,000 residents of the District filed personal property tax returns this year. Since demands for payment of this levy have been mailed to 2,200 individuals, as a result of checking Federal income tax returns through the first three letters in the alphabet, indications are that one prospective taxpayer out of every three is dodging his obligations. Certainly that unsavory record justifies the assessor's office in using every means at its command properly to enforce the law. Substantial revenues may be obtained by levying assessments against each person whose Federal income tax return indicates he also owes taxes to the District.

When all the essential information is available, however, the only means of collecting personal property taxes will be through civil suits in the local courts. Losses through delay and complicated procedure are certain to be substantial. Any law that is so weak from the viewpoint of enforcement would have to offer some positive advantages to justify its retention. And no such advantages are apparent in this case. Personal property levies are an extremely crude measure of ability to pay. The modern trend in taxation is very definitely away from imposts that have no relation to income or turnover. In a city with many transients, such as Washington, this type of revenue law is especially bad.

As a sequel to the drive against tax evasion, therefore, the District Commissioners ought to recommend a substitute for this obsolete levy. One of the most constructive aspects of the current enforcement campaign is the probability that it will greatly increase agitation for overdue changes in our local revenue system.

Europe's Ethiopia.

It is not the least disturbing and disheartening aspect of the Spanish crisis that, to such an astonishing degree, the fate of the Spanish people has been taken out of their own hands.

Their country has become a mere pawn in a desperate game whose ultimate stake is the domination of Europe. Neither the barrier of the Pyrenees nor a good neighbor policy in world affairs has saved Spain from the sorry lot of becoming the cockpit of Europe. For what may have been, in its beginnings, simply a struggle of Spaniard against Spaniard, has developed into a European struggle not less portentous because, as yet, confined to Spanish territory. The land of Velasquez and Goya, of Cervantes and El Greco has, in a very real sense, become Europe's Ethiopia.

It requires no expert or detailed knowledge of the Spanish situation to realize that Berlin and Rome look upon Gen. Franco not as a potential saviour of Spain—they are not interested in Spain as such—but as a convenient puppet prepared to further their imperial ambitions. Indeed, Messrs. Mussolini and Hitler must feel no slight degree of irritation with the rebel leader for having failed, despite the ardent assistance they have given him, to conquer Madrid on schedule time.

Ten days after the start of his ferocious assault on the capital of Spain, Franco was clearly being held up by the loyalists and there was anything but certainty that he would succeed in taking the city. Realizing this, the Fascist powers rushed into premature recognition of the rebel regime, doubtless to spur on its lagging forces and to clear the path for open intervention on a large scale should that seem desirable.

By their action the Fascist dictatorships have exposed their trump card. In effect they have earmarked Spain as an Italian-German sphere of influence and have challenged the rest of the world to prevent them from carrying their plan into effect. Since it may not be necessary, however, to give the rebels more than the same degree of aid already vouchsafed them, nominal adherence to the nonintervention pact is still the order of the day.

From the French and British point of view even the fiction of nonintervention has its uses. It permits them to avoid making a choice which they clearly prefer not to make at this time. If they are worried by the action of Germany and Italy in staking out a claim over Spain, whose strategic importance is considerable, they feel it is better to let matters ride rather than force a showdown at the present time.

Events may prove this point of view short-sighted in the extreme. Nazi ambitions obviously have not been satisfied by the overthrow of large sections of the Treaty of Versailles. Italy's ambitions were not satisfied with the conquest of Ethiopia. Japan is not content with Manchukuo.

The appetite of the dictators obviously grows with the eating. If Germany and Italy succeed in imposing their will in the Spanish crisis, and that now seems likely, there is every reason to believe this victory will be but the stepping stone to further conquests. And it is idle to believe that the United States has only an academic interest in these forward moves of the dictatorships.

Sanctity Of Contract.

Formally condemning the "insurgent" strike of the Atlantic and Gulf Coast seamen, delegates to the A. F. of L. convention have pledged support to the loyal seamen who "refused to be coerced or stampeded into an outlaw strike." In taking this action the federation is merely reaffirming that fidelity to the sanctity of contract for which it has always stood. Recognition of the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively is of little value to either employers or employes if agreements thus achieved can be violated at will.

The unions that have been most successful in making permanent gains for labor have been the ones insisting most strongly upon the inviolability of contracts for the duration of the agreement. Unions unable to control sporadic outbreaks, and unions that authorize sympathetic strikes, forfeit the confidence of employers and greatly impair their value as bargaining agencies.

The maritime unions have an exceedingly poor record in this respect. One of the chief grievances of the West Coast shipowners is the failure of the unions with which they have concluded agreements to obey the terms of the award. They assert that over 450 unlawful strikes and stoppages of work occurred during the two years following conclusion of the 1934 West Coast agreement. Obviously collective bargaining offers little or no promise under such conditions. The present impassse on the Pacific Coast is at least partly due to the distrust aroused by failure of the unions to live up to the terms of the last agreement.

Under the circumstances, it is the more short-sighted for the insurgent Atlantic Coast groups to try to better their position by repudiating the contracts made for them by representatives of the International Seamen's Union. If they have grievances against the leadership of the union, they should thresh out their differences at the proper time and place. Internal disputes can never be a valid excuse for breaking faith with employers with whom collective agreements have been negotiated.

The Red Rider in Action.

The dangerous absurdity of the "red rider" legislation could not be more clearly demonstrated than by the action of the District school authorities in banning current publications of the Civic Education Service from local classrooms. It may be hoped that Dr. Ballou applied this highly offensive censorship with the underlying idea of forcing the issue to a showdown. Certainly the incident should hasten the complete and final repeal of a law which so degrades the teaching profession in the National Capital.

The major publication of the Civic Education Service is The American Observer, a completely objective and well-edited review for pupils of high schools and college age. This weekly paper has on its editorial board such men as Dr. Harold G. Moulton, the president of the Brookings Institution, and Dr. Charles A. Beard, probably the most famous of America's living historians.

Recently The American Observer, which has Nation-wide circulation, inaugurated a series of three purely factual articles describing the "three systems of government" which "are competing for the mastery in the world today." Subscribers in the District schools were permitted to read the first two articles, on democracy and fascism. But the article on communism, in the current issue of the paper, is regarded by Dr. Ballou as containing "certain assertions" which are "subject to misunderstanding."

If that is the basis of the censorship imposed by the superintendent of schools, he would do well to refer to the preceding article, on fascism, to the circulation of which among his charges he has raised no question. In that article it was stated that the subjects of Fascist states "are afraid to speak lest they say something which the rulers do not like."

Taken in conjunction with Dr. Ballou's present action that assertion in The American Observer is certainly "subject to misunderstanding." One might conclude from it, for instance, that the local superintendent of schools regards himself as living under a government which in one vital respect is indistinguishable from that of Mussolini and Hitler. And as long as the "red rider" remains on the statute books such a misunderstanding will not be very far-fetched.

Industrial Iscariots.

A taste of their own medicine is in store for certain conscienceless persons who have betrayed fellow industrial workers in order to line their own pockets.

The Post yesterday mentioned a few of the names obtained by a Senate committee inquiring into the status of workingmen's civil liberties; the full list is soon to be published officially. Organized labor will not miss this event. The names of each spy and undercover operator will be noted and, in all justice, those who have been supplying employers with names for quick firing will in turn find their own names checked in employe files as dangerously untrustworthy. The blacklisters, in effect, will themselves be blacklisted.

It will not be a pretty list. Among the scattered names selected for mention in the news columns appeared a living Elmer Gantry. A clergyman with a parish in an Ohio town, he has been identified as a "street, undercover and pulpit operative" with assignments to combat a strike threat and promote a company union. Others mentioned included Iscariot-minded union officers who have delivered reports on union activities to plant managers; a "saleswoman" who insinuated panic into the minds of workers' wives; and several who, through one device or another, served as stool pigeons in the midst of workers.

Fortunately there is an effective poison for such types. It is publicity. Once known, a spy's usefulness is forever spoiled. Not only the operators but the organizations who directed them should find themselves seriously incapacitated when the light from Capitol Hill has finished playing over them.

Olms, Sweet Olms.

Paris humor, according to panting couriers, is veering toward the double negative. Typical of cafe smart chat is said to be the tale of a man who entered a restaurant and ordered coffee without cream. "Sorry," replied the waiter, "we are all out of cream, but I can give you coffee without milk."

There is in this a note reminiscent of that older story which went the rounds some years ago treating of a gentleman tippler who composed the rhyme: "Last night while going up the stair, I met a man who wasn't there; he wasn't there again today—my gosh, I wish he'd go away!"

In any event, London now caps all this sort of thing. Its zoo has just received a collection of remarkable little creatures known, oddly, as olms. Having nothing to do with electrical measurement and still less with a certain amateur detective of Baker street fame, they appear to be a type of newt. Dalmatia is their home and there they abound in subterranean caves and grottoes. Because of their sunless habitat, their bodies are dead white except for red gills. What is more, they turn black if light rays reach them, and die forthwith. As a result, their tank in the London zoo must be kept in complete darkness.

So, plainly, children of the A. A. Milne persuasion will soon be tugging their nurses' apron-strings and beseeching: "Please, Nanny, mayn't we go to the zoo this afternoon and not see the olms?"

"It Can't Happen Here."

Election Postmortem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of November 18 one who signs himself "An American Citizen" says it was Roosevelt's "blast" against "economic royalists," "the munitions makers" and the millions of taxpayers' money he "gave for relief" that re-elected him by "the biggest vote in our history."

I would hate to believe any such thing, much less say it. No doubt your correspondent voted for the President for those reasons and because he got some of the relief money and because he hates any one who makes munitions or who is a large employer and big businessman. But is he not forgetting that Christianity was saved by gunpowder and present day "economic royalists" were yesterday's poor boys as a rule?

If the President got the "largest vote in our history," so did Landon get the largest vote ever given a runner up in any Presidential election. The truth is that the President did not get as great a percentage as did either Coolidge in 1924, with a total of 60 per cent or Harding and Coolidge in 1920, 65 per cent. Cox and Roosevelt got only about 34 per cent of the total popular vote which was 5 per cent less than Landon and Knox this year. And Cox and Roosevelt then did not make the mess of the campaign that Landon and Hamilton did this year. They found out America doesn't want any foreign entanglements, something the President seems to have forgotten, judging by his present trip.

"Mercy Deaths."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am replying to an address given by the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of the First Congregational Church, on the subject of "mercy deaths."

In this address which was printed in news form in The Post of November 16, it stated that the right to a "mercy death" was "stanchly" supported by the Rev. Anderson—death, for example, to idiots, imbeciles and the criminally insane.

Perhaps the Rev. Anderson does not realize that the happiest people on earth are idiots and imbeciles. These people as a majority are harmless in every respect, and yet an agent of the church stanchly recommends death for this type of person. He even goes as far as to compare human beings of this type with a mad dog or a horse with a broken leg.

It is evident that the Rev. Anderson is not aware of that fact that many of those judged criminally insane are not always insane for the rest of their life, but just momentarily or for a brief period of time.

Let us consider the fact that every human being has only one life on this earth, and when this life is taken away it can not be replaced.

From the beginning of time our Lord has put all types of people on this earth. Let us as human beings live and let live until the end of time, and help those that cannot help themselves, instead of considering death of any kind for them.

Chicagoan On Abattoirs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of November 17 carried an article in which the spokesman for a citizens association questioned the opposition of other associations to the establishment of an abattoir in the Northeast section of the city.

To one who has lived in Chicago and spent a great deal of time in that city, it is amazing to note not only the lack of understanding of how the presence of a slaughter house can cause a section to deteriorate, but the apparant feeling that it is a strictly local problem of no concern to property holders in other sections. It is only necessary to drive through the Chicago loop when the wind is from the southwest to realize that odors from abattoirs travel for miles. It is not uncommon to hear complaints from citizens of the north suburban villages of Evanston and Winnetka, twice as far removed as Chevy Chase from the Benning section.

With adverse winds, I have no doubt but that the residents of northern and western sections of the District will have just complaint against an abattoir located in any section of the city. Businesses of this nature belong out at least 15 to 20 miles in the country in the opposite direction from the prevailing winds.

Citizens associations which pass resolutions on the promptings of financially interested parties should realize that relatively few people could possibly benefit by employment or local business stimulation, whereas thousands might be injured by blighted property values and homes suddenly made undesirable.

A MIDDLE WESTERNER.

Fr. Adelman Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the November 16 issue of The Post Mr. Rogers accuses me of stating that God has donned the brown shirt to fight on the side of the reactionaries in Spain. I neither said that nor implied it. Neither do I believe that God has donned a red shirt to fight for Sovietism. Do Messrs. Rogers, Black and O'Connor (all corresponding in the same issue) know that the Leftist newspaper of Mexico City, El Universal, refers to the Loyalists as the Reds? I need hold no brief for fascism to repudiate the newspaper cant that constantly represents the Spanish conflict as one between fascism and democracy. Time will show that the Rightists have been very democratic in comparison with the Reds.

As for Spain's "democratic" government: Mr. Rogers speaks of a "duly elected government;" Mr. O'Connor, of a "democratically conducted election," and Mr. Black, of a "duly elected constitutional government." Do these men know that, according to a scholar of wide repute, "the election of the so-called democratic government was held in a state of terror. Communists paraded Granada in armored cars. Right-wing candidates were, in many cases, forbidden to address their constituents. The results of the election were nullified in many centers where they were favorable to the Rightists." Do they know that in spite of the Rightists being deprived of the democratic use of the press and radio "a majority in Spain voted against the Popular Front?"

Furthermore, my critics do not like the presence of Moors in the insurgent armies. They would, no doubt, readily disclaim racial prejudice, and they undoubtedly protested against the use of Africans and Asiatics in the last European war; but they need not be unduly disquieted. No amount of wishful thinking changes facts. "Gen. Franco's armies are at present estimated at approximately 160,000 in all sections. They are composed entirely of Spaniards, except for a regiment or two of Moors, who do not exceed 15,000 in number." (America, Nov. 7, 1936, p. 98.)

REV. URBAN ADELMAN,

Washington, Nov. 19.

French Transportation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In France one pays for what one receives. If one rides seated in a first-class car the fare is at the maximum; if one must perforce stand in such a car one pays a smaller amount. If one rides on the back platform—and it is to Americans a marvel to see stylishly dressed native women standing outside while the seats within are empty—one pays a still smaller fare. You will seldom, however, discover a French woman on a "first-class"; she travels "second" and on the platform, where her money will buy many times as many rides as elsewhere.

We may not need so many degrees of comfort or thrift in Washington, but we do need two men to every car and a seat for every passenger.

Washington, Nov. 18.

Schurz And Hitler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to The Post of November 17, Prof. Charles C. Tansill, of American University went to Germany as a "guest lecturer of the Carl Schurz Association and the Nazi government."

From Germany, Tansill broadcast by radio to the United States a tribute to Hitler. Now that he is back here, he gives the Nazi regime even more lavish praise.

Carl Schurz was a great democrat and liberal. He was driven out of Germany by the black reaction after the social uprising of 1848. He was driven out by a Kaiser who was not half so bitter an enemy of democracy as Hitler is.

Schurz spoke and fought all his life for freedom and human progress, the things Hitler hates and oppresses. If Schurz were in Germany now, he would not be given a chance to escape to America. His head would go on the Nazi chopping block.

A. H. JENKINS.

Letter From England.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read in your paper of the lack of news in the English newspapers concerning the romance of Edward and Mrs. Simpson, I am sending you an abstract from a letter received November 19 from England which reads:

We were all surprised to read the clippings from your papers in the United States regarding the "person" involved with Mrs. Simpson. There must be a certain amount of truth in it but it hardly seems credible. This would cause quite a stir over here if she gets her divorce. We are all interested to know what will happen.

This comes from my brother in England who has not yet read of the divorce.

ANNA M. PROPPS.

'Accessory After Fact.'

The lawyer who by resort to trickery defends a criminal whom he knows to be guilty was scored at Oklahoma City the other day by Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught, in sentencing a woman lawyer for an offense in connection with an abduction case. He said: "A lawyer in a criminal case has a right to do but one thing: To see that his client has a fair and impartial trial. If he goes any further and steps across the line, he joins hands with the defendant in the case and may become more of an accessory after the fact than he is an attorney."

The gangster movies have made the public familiar with the type of lawyer whom the gangster calls "the mouthpiece"—who is to all intents and purposes one of the gang, but who enjoys an immunity not shared by his less dangerous fellow crooks. In a movie, now and then, the gangster lawyer reforms, because of a woman's love or some other convincing influence; and, no doubt, this happens occasionally in real life. If the lawyer were disbarred because of his activity as an accessory after—or before—the fact of the crime committed by his client, that would be news; but doubtful material for the realistic cinema.

Where to draw the line in giving a defendant the best defense of which his case is legitimately capable is a difficult matter. It is reasonable to permit his attorney ample leeway in presenting his evidence in as favorable a light as possible. But that there is such a line is a patent fact which everybody knows. Perhaps this terse statement from the bench in Oklahoma may help effectively to jar the public and official complacency with which its disregard has commonly been regarded.

The Rest.

NOT many cities in the United States have a colonial manor house within their incorporated limits. In the South, where life moves at a slower tempo, such relics of the past may survive. In the North "progress" generally obliterates such reminders of the past. Washington has such a relic. It is to be found at 4343 Thirty-ninth street northwest.

The old house at this address, formerly called The Rest, was once the "big house" of a great estate, contemporary with Mount Vernon and Clean Drinking Manor, a 1,400-acre plantation which used to extend between Chevy Chase Lake and what is now Kensington, Md.

Viewed from the outside, it does not look greatly unlike its neighbors, with its bright new coat of Spanish-red paint and its unobtrusive green blinds. Inside, however, there are many evidences of antiquity—in the wide, heavy planks of the floors, in the heavy, hand-hewn timbers particularly in the basement, in the old iron locks and bolts still in good working condition, in a few old marble mantlepieces, and in the narrow, winding staircase.

The Rest began to be built in 1700 by one Charles Jones, who came from Althrop Park, England, which is within 12 miles of Sulgrave, the ancestral home of the Washingtons.

It was first a log hut, later supplemented with brick brought from England as boat ballast and paid for in tobacco, the medium of barter and exchange. The house passed through its final evolution from log hut to mansion in the early nineteenth century when it came into possession of the Lyles family through marriage into the Jones family.

The history of The Rest is closely interwoven with that of Clean Drinking Manor, the adjoining estate. Clean Drinking Manor house was built in 1750 by "Charles Jones, Gent," probably the son or a relative of the Jones who built The Rest. He married Elizabeth Coates, the granddaughter of Col. John Coates, to whom Lord Baltimore granted the Clean Drinking Manor estate in 1700. The manor homestead was given to Elizabeth as her wedding dower.

Jones' granddaughter, Elizabeth Selden, married John Augustine Washington, great-grandnephew of George Washington, and the last member of the Washington family to reside at Mount Vernon. This Mrs. Washington is buried in the old cemetery of Clean Drinking Manor.

Sallie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Lyles, married Thomas Marshall, of Marshall Hall. Marshall was an ardent collector of colonial relics.

The Washington family had fallen upon evil days. Mount Vernon mansion and grounds were utterly neglected and the old house fell into almost irretrievable decay. No doubt John Augustine Washington sold many valuable heirlooms. Many of these probably went to his neighbor, Thomas Marshall, living across the Potomac, on the Maryland side. Finally, in 1855, Washington offered Mount Vernon for sale, but Congress could not be prevailed upon to buy it.

The last of the Joneses to reside at The Rest was Mrs. Eleanor A. H. (Mrs. George Corbin Washington) Magruder, granddaughter and namesake of the last Mrs. Thomas Marshall, of Marshall Hall, and great-granddaughter of "Charles Jones, Gent."

In Mrs. Magruder's lifetime The Rest was said to contain a more varied and valuable collection of family heirlooms, antiques and other souvenirs than any other private house in the National Capital. Here were relics from Broad Creek House, the home of the Lyles; from Clean Drinking Manor, of the Joneses; from Cherry Hill, of the Bruces; from Marshall Hall, of the Marshalls, and from the homes of the Washingtons.

A number of Washington relics in the old house were impressive, including such articles as mirrors, china, urns, silver trays, vases, wine sets, furniture, and paintings and steel engravings of members of the Washington family. Of especial interest were: Gen. Washington's sideboard, Chippendale, mahogany; an old mahogany crib in which Washington was rocked at Wakefield, where he was born; the mirror Washington used at Valley Forge, and a large, handsomely carved mahogany table with claw feet, around which Robert Fulton and Washington talked over the plans of the first steamboat.

When Mrs. Magruder died, about the time of the outbreak of the World War, there was no one left who knew the value of or cared about these old treasures. They were sent off to auction and were sold for a song. It must have been a great day for the collectors.

What will be the fate of The Rest?

Perhaps the old house will go the way of the antique treasures it used to contain. The District Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution would like to preserve The Rest, but the outlook is not bright.

Since the old house is in an excellent neighborhood, it is not likely that it will be set in a row of houses to be rented to people of moderate means. Its more probable fate is demolition in order that its lovely site may be used for a great apartment house, where modern people live like bees, literally on top of one another.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

I HAVE received letters from Miami and Miami Beach attempting to justify the mugging and fingerprinting of hotel and restaurant employes this winter on the ground that this is intended to protect the hotel guests and other idle visitors from the depredations of individuals among the help who might happen to be thieves or blackmailers. The intention is not bad, but the method is Fascist and the whole process gives an idea of the incredible gall of that class of merchants, promoters and citizen-fixits who elect themselves spirits of a community and claim the right to degrade and humiliate working people in the good old Chamber of Commerce spirit.

There is no ground for suspecting that hotel guests and other idle visitors or politicians or local policemen aer superior to any other class of people out of prison. A hotel i sa public house whose entrance requirements vary from one suitcase to half a dozen trunks, and there is never any inquiry into the applicant's moral character when he steps up to sign the book. He and the man who rents a house for the season are entitled to the benefit of a doubt, and it is only fair to say that they are probably as decent as the people who go down there to work, but no more so, on the face of things.

I have encountered many hotel guests and renters in Florida and hundreds of employes, too, and I would add that although the guests and renters included some dubious, not to say notorious, characters, the help, at worst, was only a little too democratic and not very expert.

• • • •

THERE MAY have been some among them who would lift a dollar or a yard of pearls, but they don't get much pay, anyway, and people who stagger home from a night club in the dawn and sling jewels around a hotel room create an impression that a diamond watch wouldn't be missed, and set up a stronm temptation.

But even so, such thefts have not been common, as I am sure the hotel men will be eager to agree; whereas for years it has been customary for the gambling house proprietors of the North to get up a Christmas fund along about August and send it down to the two Miamis for distribution among the local Statesmen by way of preparation for the winter season. That, however, is their own affair, and not many other communities are in a position to peer down their noses at the two Miamis.

But in this country it is any American's privilege to go wherever he pleases and seek work, subject to any reasonable local regulations applying to all classes of free citizens. If the Miamis were to say that everyone, local and transient, guests as well as employes, must report to the police to be photographed and fingerprinted for comparison with the files of the Department of Justice, that would be all right, because it wouldn't work, and nobody would lose any rights. But, under the laws and the popular understanding of freedom in this country, a high-school kid from Grand Forks arriving in Miami or Miami Beach to apply for honest work is just as good as any guest, merchant, promoter and politician in town, and in a showdown might prove more desirable, although we needn't go into invidious comparisons just here.

IT IS a strange idea these leading citizens have that because they have business interests and have localized themselves a few years they have a right to herd other Americans into the police station and to require that they produce, on demand, an identity card, stamped by a cop who serves an administration which may or may not be too honest itself. It is a strange assumption, too—the more so in view of the character of many of the prominent winter visitors—that because a man is a solvent guest at a hotel he doesn't need ngerprinting as much as the bellhop who bright in the bags.

In the Fascist countries the employes carry cards, too, and are not allowed to quit one job out of protest or mere discontent or seek another one without permission of his boss. So far the leading spirits of the Miamis have not attempted to impose this restriction, but given time, with their nerve, they will. Because in their great zeal to make a dollar many of them sold the reputation of their town to Northern racketeers, and now to make another dollar they have sold down the river a principle of American freedom without which the place would have remained a foul and festering swamp.

In the matter of stealing and swindling, the help will never catch up with certain honored guests and leading citizens, and if they do get away with a little sufficient research might show that they are, after all, only stealing it back.

Growth Of Federal Commissions And Boards Raises Questions As To Their Efficiency And Regulations.

By Goodrich Wilson Lineweaver.

WILL THERE BE an effective effort to straighten out the maze of conflicting methods of administration and procedure in the Federal Government's set-up as a result of the several studies now being made for presentation to the new Congress convening in January?

For the first hundred years of the American Republic, administration of Federal activities was almost wholly through the regularly constituted executive departments, headed by a Cabinet officer. Then, in 1887, came the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, for its first decade or so a modest organization, but today a great independent agency, exercising a combination of functions that extend its jurisdiction into the far corners of remote States. Its influence develops from its control of rail and motor transportation, not alone in interstate commerce, but where interstate operations may be burdened or affected in any way by intrastate conditions.

It has taken the I. C. C. half a century to reach its present pinnacle of power and authority, with the backing of Congress and the courts, the acquiescence of the States and in many instances through their cooperation. Only one really serious attempt has been made to limit its functions, and that was in 1910, when a commerce court was created to take over purely judicial activities as distinguished from its regulatory and legislative activities. The court was short-lived and in 1913 was consolidated with the commission itself, the number of commissioners being increased accordingly, and its service bureaus separated from its adjudication processes.

Any attempt to dismember the Interstate Commerce Commission today would doubtless be futile, for it appears as deeply rooted as the Department of State or the Treasury. However, it may be used as an outstanding example of a comingling of duties in a Government agency—administrative, regulatory, judicial and legislative—without regard for the separation-of-powers doctrine written into the Constitution.

Commissions Of Today Ignore Older Doctrines.

IT IS a far cry from the Interstate Commerce Commission authorized in 1887 to the more than a score of boards and commissions dotting a Federal Government chart today. Many of them exercise functions that make a scrap of paper out of the separation-of-powers doctrine now little more than a theory as applied to these administrative agencies and several of the executive departments.

The courts have refused to interfere with the legislative powers of Congress or the prerogative of the Executive, but have been loath to disturb even the incursions of the executive and administrative agencies into the judicial field. They have reserved the right to review questions of law raised by administrative adjudication, but, generally speaking, have avoided questioning determinations of a factual character.

By 1934, as outlined by Frederick F. Blachley and Miriam E. Oatman, in "Administrative Legislation and Adjudication" (Brookings Institution—1934), there were nine different types of administrative adjudicating authorities in the Federal Government, involving nearly half a hundred departments, bureaus and independent agencies. Certain courts, with a few other specially created agencies occupied a borderline status. The latter include boards of mediation for labor disputes and advisory tribunals within the quasi-judicial and regulatory agencies.

Since 1933-34 there have been created a number of new agencies, independent or linked directly or indirectly with existing establishments, but clothed with combinations of authority. These must add to the difficulties of any reorganization of the Federal Government in the interest of economy and simplification or by coordination where functions and duties overlap.

For instance, in the public utility act of 1935, Congress confers on two independent agencies, without provision or direction for coordination, administrative or regulatory, legislative and quasi-judicial authority over certain activities of electric utility systems. These are the Securities and Exchange Commission, primarily concerned with the regulation of electric and gas holding companies and their subsidiaries, and the Federal Power Commission, with jurisdiction over the same subject matter or physicial properties if holding company subsidiaries happen to be licensees with Federal power projects or are engaged in inter-State transmission of electric energy.

Overlapping Found Common In Washington.

THAT IS by no means the first instance of duplication, overlapping and conflict, but any adjustment or removal of such obstacles to effective administration is unquestionably made more difficult by reason of the scattered authority that has accompanied the growth of the commission form of administration. And, if the public utility act of 1935 should fail to accomplish its objective, the inability to fix responsibility on either of the two commissions or on any one or two individual commissioners may serve as a "horrible example" of the practice in Federal legislation and governmental operations that has cast to the winds tested theories of effective public service.

A survey by a special committee on administrative law of the American Bar Association disclosed that more than 70 Federal departments, bureaus and independent agencies, whose primary functions are administrative or regulatory, exercise judicial power in 267 different classes. These figures do not include the agencies operating under statutes held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, the many Government corporations, or the Civil Service Commission and the General Accounting Office, whose functions as general service agencies to the Government, as a whole, put them in a separate class.

The Government Corporation is another type of administration that functions along the lines of the commission or board, in many instances with even broader powers, and with the same difficulties of control and supervision.

The future of agencies of this type, authorized to exercise legislative and frequently judicial functions raises interesting questions.

Growth Of Boards Raises Many Questions.

ARE THE TYPES of Federal agencies the best that can be devised to handle what has come to be the management of the biggest business in the world?

Is the commission form of administration preferable to the single responsibility of an administrator at the head of an agency, especially if there should be provided a special tribunal within it to pass on judicial matters pending the adoption of the separation-of-powers doctrine?

Does the method of selecting the members of commissions or boards or of Government corporations, frequently without regard for their qualifications for the particular positions or previous experience in major affairs, make for better administration than where responsibility is placed on a single individual, with executive of administrative ability and an adequate staff?

Assuming that the commission form is essential to avoid too much power being intrusted to a single authority, will public service ever attract men for group administration who will lay aside personal views, jealousies and politics with consistence?

Finally, so far as the Government is concerned as the representative of all the people, can it expect full justice for itself and for that part of the public immediately concerned, where primarily administrative authorities, each as an independent tribunal, exercise the functions of complaining witness, prosecutor, judge and jury, with no appeal from the exercise of discretion unless a point of law is actually involved?

The answers to these questions involve consideration of fundamental factors that are as far-reaching as the demands for economy, reduction in personnel, and other reforms, especially since simplification of governmental administrative procedure, which would follow the solution, would result in huge direct and indirect savings in time, money and effort.

Because The Strong Are Weak.

WHEN ITALY and Germany recognized the regime of Gen. Francisco Franco as the legitimate government of Spain they impaled Great Britain and France on the horns of a new dilemma.

Despite outward appearances, the action so precipitately taken by Rome and Berlin was not a sign of strength. On the contrary, it was a confession of real weakness. It exposed the essential fragility of Franco's position. And, what is even more important, it also revealed how very rickety are those outwardly pretentious edifices of power erected by Mussolini and Hitler.

The circumstances surrounding this latest intervention of the German and Italian dictatorships in the Spanish civil war and the developments that have followed hard on this move are, in this connection, very revealing.

Some time ago Count Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, and Chancellor Hitler concluded an agreement at Berlin which, among other things, declared the readiness of the two governments to recognize the Spanish rebels at the first appropriate moment. The presumption was, and it was backed up by inspired reports from Rome and Berlin, that this would occur the moment that Franco had established himself at Madrid. There was no reason to believe, at that time, that he would have any difficulty in doing so. For weeks his progress toward the capital had been, if slow, relatively uninterrupted. When Ciano and Hitler met, the fall of Madrid appeared to be certain.

• • • •

BUT, AS ALL the world knows, this belief was based on a miscalculation. The loyalists at Madrid, instead of giving way, resisted. Madrid did not fall at the first whiff of grapeshot. On the contrary, it soon became evident that Gen. Franco's triumphant entry into the capital might be postponed indefinitely and, possibly, be prevented altogether.

Now if the Spanish Fascist leader really had behind him, as Italy and Germany insist he has, the great majority of the Spanish population, his strategy, after meeting his initial rebuff at Madrid, would obviously have been to re-form his lines, to encircle the capital with an iron ring and slowly starve out its defenders. Certainly, as the dictator-designate of Spain, there was every reason in the world why he should have avoided reducing Madrid to ruins, which is exactly what he is now doing.

But he could not afford to wait. His army, despite the advantages it has enjoyed from the beginning in airplanes, tanks and munitions, is short in numbers. Eliminate the Moors and the Foreign Legionnaires, whose numbers are, after all, limited, and he has little left but a small army of officers and willing or unwilling levies. For him, therefore, the conquest of Madrid, by whatever means and at whatever cost, is absolutely essential. Failure to do so means the collapse of the revolt and his own doom. That is why, in an effort to cow the loyalists into submission, he is now engaged on his mad destruction of the capital.

But the failure would also mean, as pointed out here the other day, a very serious setback to those Fascist powers who have provided him with his tanks and airplanes and munitions and without whom he would have been nowhere today. So deeply have Germany and Italy become committed to the rebel cause that the failure of Franco's efforts could very easily have a very disastrous effect—if not on the the domestic situations of Hitler and Mussolini, certainly on their international position.

• • • •

. FOR THESE DICTATORS, therefore, Franco's failure to make a speedy entry into Madrid contained catastrophic possibilities. Whatever successes they have achieved in the field of foreign policy have been the result not so much of their own strength but of the weakness of their opponents. That was true of Germany's occupation of the demilitarized Rhine zone, which occurred at a time when, between them, Great Britain and France still enjoyed an enormous preponderance of power over the Third Reich. That was also true of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, which Great Britain alone could have effectively blocked from the very beginning if it had not suffered a continuous attack of timidity. That has, indeed, been true of every diplomatic move that has accrued to the advantage of the Fascist powers in recent years and steadily dimmed the prestige of the Paris and London governments.

Possibly the time has passed when the great European democracies can call the bluff of Hitler and Mussolini. Yet the developments subsequent to the recognition of Gen. Franco indicate that neither Rome nor Italy is so very sure of that.

• • • •

THEY APPEAR to be as aware of Great Britain's and France's real strength as of the apparent unwillingness of those nations to use that strength. But they are more certain of the first than of the second of these facts.

That is why the recognition of Franco has not immediately been followed by the granting of open support to the Spanish rebels, which is what will obviously occur if the rebels cannot win unaided. That is why the Berlin and Rome governments are now saying that, for the time being, they will continue as members of the London nonintervention committee. This is clearly intended to reassure Great Britain, which may be satisfied with the appearance of nonintervention even at the moment when the last vestige of doubt has been removed that it is nothing but a hollow sham, with Italy and Germany aiding the rebels and Russia aiding the loyalists.

This maneuver on the part of the Fascist dictatorships may succeed. Great Britain is so confused as to its policies that it is apparently ready to grasp at any straw, even one which so frequently has proved to be a snare and a delusion. The British lion has persuaded himself that he is no match for a dachshund or a spaniel. At a time when his claws are sharp, if not as sharp as they may be in a year or two, and his stomach is fuller than it has been in years, the lion is acting like a very sick cat, capable only of scratching itself. Alice in Wonderland never experienced a more fantastic situation.

George Eliot.

Tomorrow is George Eliot's birthday. She was born November 22, 1819.

I was shocked a few days ago to see in a London bookseller's catalog a copy of the first edition of her masterpiece, "The Mill on the Floss," published in 1860 in three volumes, offered for eight shillings.

Of the greatest British novelists of the nineteenth century, Jane Austen, Walter Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, Emily Bronte, Charlotte Bronte, George Eliot, Thomas Hardy, Robert Louis Stevenson, George Eliot has suffered more during the last 20 years than any of the others.

• • • •

Her name is not often mentioned today in the reviews or in conversation; her books stay on the library shelves and even "Silas Marner," which all candidates for entrance examinations to colleges were formerly compelled to read, seems to have faded.

Yet she has been dead only 56 years, and from her death in 1880 to the end of the century she stood in intellectual grandeur, apparently immortal, unshakably secure.

She may have a revival some day, but I doubt it. She will, of course, always have some readers. Intellectually, she was, in endowment and education, a giant in comparison with Dickens, but today many place Dickens as the greatest of all English novelists and as a creative writer next to Shakespeare, whereas—well, what is the matter?

• • • •

The matter is that she carried too much excess baggage. Her earlier books are far better than her later ones. "Daniel Deronda" is almost unreadable.

She was portentiously serious, yet her earlier novels are certainly not dull and they contain shrewd observations on life and profound interpretations of human nature.

The best book on George Eliot I ever read is by Elizabeth Haldane and was published in 1927.

U. S. Chamber Asks Gradual Curtailment; Pledges Re-employment Aid.

activity will undertake to replace some of the functions of private enterprise in advancing recovery.

"There can be no substitute for private enterprise in the development of improved economic conditions."

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, meanwhile, announced at a press conference that 220,000 workers were returned to employment in combined manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries between the middle of September and the middle of October.

She said that aggregate pay rolls weekly during October were $16,030,000 greater than in the preceding month.

The chamber committee's conclusions in general held that:

"Experience has demonstrated the difficulty of attempting to obtain accurate unemployment figures through census methods.

"Estimates of unemployment in a national basis are necessarily in accurate, and lend themselves to exaggeration.

"Employment is a local matter, with many local variations, seasonal and otherwise, and unemployment is likewise local.

"Projects of work-relief should not be allowed to take the place in any degree of established agencies for performance of Government functions.

"Projects of work relief should not be permitted to compete in any degree with private enterprise for workers, skilled or unskilled, and should be so conducted as to encourage workers to seek private employment.

Work Education Urged.

"It is evident that further advance in business activities will require the services in private enterprise of persons now on work-relief at public expense.

"There should be immediate expansion of facilities in the States and communities for young people and for workers desiring to increase their skill, to obtain training that will fit them for employments through which they can advance their standards of living in accordance with their own capacities. • • •"

The chamber's report estimated the number of persons re-employed in business and industry since the depression's depths and "the number of employables in business and industry who now seek jobs." Those re-employed since March, 1933, are put at 8,500,000, with the statement that at least 3,000,000 of these have gone back to work since May, 1935.

The report, confined almost entirely to employment, expresses the view that making or accepting estimates on unemployment is impracticable.

Estimates from many sources of unemployment in the country were described as "unsatisfactory, impracticable and inaccurate."

Industry Employing More.

The chamber committee's study was narrowed to mean employment of those who work for wages or salary, and unemployment to mean only those who would so work.

Their first conclusion is that private employment is steadily increasing, with a rise since the summer of 1935 that is termed "particularly steady and progressive."

The report says:

"Adequate data do not exist for accurate estimates of unemployment in the United States.

"In the nature of things it cannot be expected that for so large a population in so large an area, with so many diverse economic conditions, and with nothing like agreement as to who are to be considered as employable, adequate data can be collected, and kept even approximately current for national figures."

The chamber's statement asserted that "the time seems clearly to have arrived to urge that there be a return to avoidance of all statements (on unemployment) which appear to be statistical but in truth have no such character."

By "careful computation," the chamber then revealed its own estimates as "the number of involuntary unemployed persons who would work for wages and salaries to have been at the depths of the depression not more than 10,000,000, and to have been in June, 1936, under 4,000,000, and in November, 1936, further under 4,000,000."

The report stressed its conclusion that "there is already a shortage of skilled labor in many sections and in several industries. Such a shortage usually appears as activities increase after a depression."

Pointing to the reverse number of unskilled workers among employable persons on Federal work-relief, the committee said that this "suggests there may now be special problems of a kind which have not yet been given general public recognition • • • Lack of trained workers has been reported as definitely preventing new private employment in areas as widely separated as Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Iowa."

The prompt renewal of training activities for unskilled workers was urged.

Other chamber committee reports were received in the adjustment of Federal farm credit policies adapted to improved agricultural conditions and on the State compact method as a constitutional means of utilizing State legislative powers.

Emergency Held Passing.

In the former report, prepared by the chamber's agricultural committee, credit practices followed by the Government in lending to agriculture during the emergency are called "a departure from principles universally accepted as sound in normal times."

Stating that "the emergency is passing," the report recommended that appraisal and lending policies of the Federal Land Banks "be such as will tend to keep the risks relatively low, thereby reducing the danger of losses which would impair the financial structure of the banks and confining their operations to that portion of the mortgage credit field to which they are particularly adapted."

The report disapproved incorporation into the permanent farm credit system of the Federal Government of those loan policies which place the major risk on the Government, directly or indirectly; and asked a reduction of the amound of credit extended for emergency production and seed loans.

Grocer Kills Boar In Tennessee; Big Game Hunters Fail

Tellico Plains, Tenn., Nov. 20 (AP). A Chattanooga grocery today followed the example set yesterday by a studious University of Tennessee professor in downing a wild Prussion boar while expert "big game" hunters blasted wildly and futilely at the agile tuskers.

The ten-day hunt under State and National direction is being staged in the Cherokee National Forest near here.

M. F. McDonald, using a huge, outmoded .38 caliber rifle, honored the advice to "shoot when you see 'em" and crept within a few yards of the feeding animal before he pulled the trigger. The grocer's first shot crippled the 160-pound boar, but it took three more heavy bullets to kill the animal.

Federal Forest Rangers in charge of the hunt said at least 60 Prussian boars have been sighted by the hunters, but they have been unable to hit them.

he said. "I was beaten by a small margin."

So that year he returned to Washington and began practicing law. Davies had managed Wilson's Western campaign, had served as secretary of the Democratic National Committee, and as national committeeman from Wisconsin.

He upheld this personal tradition of service to the Democratic Party this year by contributing $11,500 to the campaign fund.

Reports from Moscow last night said that Russians, observing the goings-on of workmen around the Spasso House, official residence of the United States Ambassador, hold that Davies must be a very rich man, indeed.

New furniture has been unloaded to furnish the house anew from garret to cellar, the Associated Press reported, and the snow-filled backyard of the palace is filled with new bathtubs and plumbing equipment.

Built During War.

A pre-war sugar capitalist built the mansion in the first year of the World War, decorating it in elaborate taste and style. But the Davies are installing a huge ventilating system and cooling devices for food storage in the vast cellars of the house.

Davies, who styles himself "a corporation lawyer of liberal outlook," said yesterday that he plans to leave for Moscow about the end of December, and that he will be sworn in next Monday.

His last previous prominent appearance in the news columns came in December of last year, when he married Mrs. Marjorie Post Close Hutton, heiress to the Postum and Post Toasties millions and a directress of the $63,000,000 General Foods Corporation, who had then obtained her divorce from Edward F. Hutton, financier and uncle of the "Woolworth Princess," Barbara Hutton, now Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow.

The ceremony brought gasps from the most luxury-calloused society reporters in New York. The former wife of the Liberty League Hutton wanted it held in her 70-room triplex apartment at 2 East Ninety-second street, the one Mr. Hutton had given her.

It cost $2,000 to dye the chrysanthemums pink for the affair, under the direction of Johnson, Mrs. Hutton's personal florist. Outside florists sent in a mere 15 men to arrange in two days' hard work the 5,000 blossoms, which cost $4,800.

The wedding cake was 5 feet wide by 3 feet tall, and the icing matched the blush pink sample which Mrs. Hutton had sent to the caterer. Three caterers came to the house to help her 25 servants serve the 50 guests.

Other Estates.

Besides her New York apartment, the present Mrs. Davies has estates in Palm Beach, the Adirondacks and North Carolina. She gives her age as "about 45."

Mr. Davies, still democratic in manner, poured very good Scotch for reporters yesterday, parried questions evasively on policy matters, and pledged himself to do his best for the United States. The reporters liked him fine.

The palace he will use in Moscow has one bathroom 25 feet square, great dangling crystal chandeliers, stained-glass windows, marble staircases and heavy damask hangings. The ambassador's bedroom, now done in baby blue, is as large as a small Washington apartment. The dining hall seats 300 guests easily. The ballroom, done in marble columns and decorated with a chandelier of crystal, 10 feet in diameter, is the palace's show place.

The man who built it, a sugar king named Tverkov, never had a chance to stay in it. When it was finished he was shot on its front steps as the revolution broke out.

'Watchful Waiting' Now Coughlin Plan

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin says in next Monday's edition of Social Justice that he suspended activities of his National Union for Social Justice because of "a barricade builded by no superior, but rather by the laity and the clergy in America."

"I shall not continue to wage the battle which I have fought," he says, "as long as the generals are indifferent and as long as my fellow officers are in such flagrant disagreement.

"I have not deserted the members of the National Union. Together we will dig ourselves in the front trenches awaiting the decision from the generals in command to advance. Silence is better on my part for the moment. Rest and quiet is the order of the day for you. Watchful waiting!"

and the Spanish rebels impended tonight when General Franco warned Paris he intended to file formal claim to $250,000,000 in gold deposited here by Spanish Loyalists.

Franco made it plain that if the French government does not willingly surrender the funds he will seek aid of Premier Mussolini and Fuehrer Hitler in getting them.

The vast treasure was accumulated over centuries by the Kings and Queens, of Spain. Some of it dates back to days when the Spanish conquistadors worked mines of Mexico and South America.

Transfer of the gold from Spain to Paris was carried out with the greatest secrecy, but it is understood that already $250,000,000 lies in the underground safety vaults here.

Undoubtedly some of the money transferred here has been used by the Loyalists to purchase food and munitions abroad. But the bulk of it remains, earmarked in the name of the Spanish government of Premier Francisco Largo Caballero or other officials.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 20.—Great Britain, moving cautiously in the face of widening European tension, will consent to the Spanish Nationalists' threatened blockade of Barcelona providing Rebel Gen. Francisco Franco establishes a safety zone for foreign shipping, it was reported tonight.

Groundwork for such a compromise, to ease a rapidly spreading international situation crammed with grave possibilities, was laid by Foreign Minister Anthony Eden in a statement to the House of Commons.

Distinction must be drawn, he warned anxious members, between the status of British ships on the high seas and in a foreign port which might be the scene of military operations.

The foreign minister therefore adopted the position that Franco's communique from the rebel headquarters at Burgos warning foreign powers and threatening to destroy Barcelona, if necessary, does not carry formal threat of blockade, but only of bombardment of the port.

Reports Britain will refrain from defying Franco in his efforts to isolate the Catalan port were strengthened, when Eden, speaking at a meeting of the Primrose League at Leamington, said:

"Because some who should be firemen take a hand now and again in feeding the flames, there is no reason why the whole fire brigade should leave their posts to join in fanning the fires of Europe's furnace."

Britain's course in the newly magnified Spanish crisis probably will bring a warning to British ships to avoid danger zones of Spanish waters, while the government maintains its present policy of passive noninterference coupled wiht armed neutrality.

It was understood a special meeting of ministers in the House of Commons last night animatedly discussed such a policy.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 20.—Government forces retreated late tonight across the Manzanares River from the Casa del Campo section, while the defense junta asserted its men had gained ground at the northwestern edge of the city.

Terrified civilians fled into the center of Madrid after Fascist bombs and shells wrecked their homes in outlying sections. Thousands of ill-clad men, women and children slept in subway stations.

Along Madrid's western limits, government militiamen entrenched themselves behind the Manzanares River after their retreat, which an official announcement said was a "strategic" move.

Heavy rainfall drenched the soldiers, but they poured unceasing fire from rifles, machine guns and tanks across the shallow stream in an effort to check any Fascist attempt to enter the city from that side.

The government declared its forces annihilated a body of Moorish cavalry in University City, the northwestern district of Madrid, into which the Fascists have penetrated.

[Hunger was added tonight to the peril of shot and shell as the rebels tightened their grip on the beleaguered capital, a United Press dispatch stated. Many restaurants displayed the sign "No more food." Their rations were exhausted and they were unable to obtain more. So acute has the situation become the loyalist defense junta is considering a plan to send the women and children of Madrid to other cities, where they can be fed and also escape the danger of the rebels' bombing.—Editor's note.]

At noon the bombardment broke out anew, with government batteries firing the heaviest shells.

An insurgent infantry and cavalry attack earlier in the day was repulsed at three edges of the city.

'Coming Out Party' of Miss Carlile Porter in Capital Draws a Glittering Throng to Home of Parents

Post-Debs and Debutantes Assist Washington Bud With Tea.

Diplomatic, Social Set Crowd to Function At 19th St. Home.

By Dudley Harmon.

The lone traffic officer stationed before the home of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Davis D. Porter had a problem on his hands late yesterday afternoon as narrow Nineteenth street gradually became filled for a solid block with gleaming limousines bringing their owners to greet the Porters' debutante daughter, Miss Carlile Porter at her "coming out" party.

Asked to "rest their wraps upstairs" by an old gray-haired Negro butler, the guests descended again and entered the drawing room, where the debutante received with her mother against a great bank of chrysanthemums of all shades and sizes. Miss Porter wore a white satin gown made on princess lines, with short puffed sleeves, and with at a string of tiny pearls. Her mother's black velvet gown, floor-length, was trimmed at the sleeves with brilliants, and she, too, wore a necklace of pearls.

Grouped in the dining room, helping with tea and sandwiches, were several postdebs and debutantes of this year whom Miss Porter chose to assist her. They included Miss Stellita Stapleton, in a long black taffeta dress. Miss Margot Garrett, another who made her bow this week; Miss Marguerite Hagner, Miss Nancy Leiter, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Alice Tuckerman, in black with a bodice of turquoise blue; Miss Anne Child, in flame-colored satin; Miss Huldah Bradley, of Philadelphia; Miss Gloria Grosvenor and Miss Ethel Worthington, who is coming out later this winter.

Mrs. Joseph Leiter poured tea for a while, as did several other friends of Mrs. Porter, including Mrs. Wallach Merriam and Mrs. Julian Story, of Philadelphia. The engagement of Mrs. Story's daughter to Mr. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, son of Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt and the late Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was recently announced.

The Cuban Ambassador, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson, chatted in the hall with Mrs. Campbell Prichett, who wore a frock of black velvet trimmed in lace. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Vincent Benet were present. Mrs. Benet wearing a long black tailored coat and a small black felt hat. Among many others there were Mrs. George T. Pettingill, wife of the commandant of the Navy Yard, in a gray wool dress and matching hat; Mr. Clarence Hewes, Miss Yvonne de Mauduit, Mrs. F. C. Bradley, of the British Embassy, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman.

Miss Jane Plitt Becomes Bride Of G. W. Offutt

Reception at Country Club Held After Ceremony in Baltimore Church.

A wedding of interest in two cities took place last evening at 8 o'clock when Miss Jane Mays Plitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Plitt, Baltimore, Md., was married to Mr. George Warren Offutt III, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Warren Offutt, jr., of Washington. The ceremony took place at the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Roland Park, in Baltimore, the Rev. Fred Coombs Reynolds officiating.

The church was decorated with palms, ferns, lilies and snapdragons, and tall candles burned at the altar. The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines and trimmed with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor was Mrs. James R. Monteith, who wore a frock of turquoise blue velvet, made with an old-fashioned hoop skirt, and a matching headdress of ostrich feathers. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Miss Norah Worthington, the maid of honor, wore a frock similar to that of the matron of honor and also carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles Charretton Reeder, of Baltimore; Mrs. R. Grinstead Vaughan, jr., of Baltimore; Miss Virginia Reifsnider, of Westminister, Md., and Miss Mary Gertrude Offutt, of Washington. They wore gowns of coral velvet fashioned like those of the maid and matron of honor and carried similar bouquets.

Mr. Offutt served as his son's best man. The ushers were Mr. Stirling Harrison, of Leesburg; Mr. Worthington Weatherley, of Baltimore, and Mr. Edgar Carter, Mrs. Oswald Hayes, Mrs. Clarence McClaire and Mr. Edward Clarke, of Washington.

A reception at the Baltimore Country Club followed the ceremony. The young couple left for a wedding trip to White Sulphur Spring, the bride wearing a green suit trimmed with a blue fox collar.

Mr. Offutt was graduated from Princeton, and the bride attended Hollins College at Hollins, Va.

School Group Gives Dance.

The boys of Landon School, in Bethesda, Md., entertained at a dance last night, celebrating the close of their football season. The Headmaster and Mrs. Paul L. # House of Mercy Benefit Is Dec. 9

Thomas L. Thomas to Sing, Heitzel Will Play at Performance.

Mrs. Henry C. Morris is chairman of the concert to be given December 9 at the Shoreham Hotel by Thomas L. Thomas, well known young baritone, whose voice has been enjoyed by hundreds of listeners over the radio. It will be for benefit of the House of Mercy. This will be the first appearance in Washington of Mr. Thomas, who is endorsed by Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, and is a pupil of Oscar Seagel.

Kurt Heitzel's many friends will welcome the announcement he is to play for this concert, given for one of the best known charities of Washington.

The committee for the concert met yesterday at the home of Mrs. Morris to make final plans for the event. Other members of the group are Mrs. ZeBarney Phillips, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Barron du Bois, Mrs. Horatio Gillmor, Mrs. James E. Byrnes, Mrs. P. Lee Phillips, Mrs. John L. Turrentine and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, newly-elected president of the board.

Davies Selection As Envoy to Soviet Confirms Rumors

News that Mr. Joseph E. Davies has been appointed United States Ambassador to the Soviet Republic comes as a climax to repeated rumors that he would be rewarded for party work with a high position in the American diplomatic corps. The rumors have been especially current since his recent marriage to the former Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, who is noted for her clothes and jewels, as well as for her charitable work in New York's "Hell's Kitchen."

Mr. Davies is now occupying his apartment at the Shoreham, and Mrs. Davies is expected to join him there today. At present, however, they have not decided when they will set sail for his new post.

The Davies spent the summer between Mrs. Davies' lodge in the Adirondacks and trips on her palatial yacht. They were married in her huge New York apartment in a "pink" ceremony—the bride wearing a pink gown, the rooms decorated in a profusion of pink flowers and there was also a great wedding cake of that shade.

Mary Jane Semmes On Wedding Trip

A marriage last May, announcement of which has just been made, is that of Miss Mary Jane Semmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Semmes, of Miami Beach, Fla., formerly of Washington, to Mr. Edward M. Flaherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Flaherty, of Newcastle, Pa.

The wedding took place May 20 at Frederick, Md., where the ceremony was performed at St. John's Roman Catholic Church by the Rev. Father Josietus. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Thomas Weir, of this city, attended the couple.

The bride is a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent and Mr. Flaherty of Georgetown University Law School. They are now on their way to Nassau on a belated honeymoon and on their return will reside in Newcastle.

Society Notes

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Helen Drury is a clever hostess. Yesterday her home in Bancroft Place was packed with members of the younger set and a few of their mothers, all gathered for the luncheon in honor of debutante, Bette Hartz.

Helen was in black crepe with bright beaded flowers adding the right touch of color. Assisting her were her sisters, Peggy Kyle and Kitty Burke, the former in a black swing frock and the latter a newcomer here, in gold lame shirred down the front.

Bette arrived a bit late and quite breathless—she and an officer of the law had had different views concerning a certain traffic light which was red at the point in question. Bette smiled her pretty smile and the officer, knowing just how it was, excused her this time after exacting the promise of no repetition.

The guest of honor had on a black ribbed crepe frock designed with short sleeves and two little triangles of beading at the top of the bodice which was finished with a high neck bound with apricot velvet, just matching the band on her black velvet hat. Young Janet Hartz, who will follow in Bette's footsteps a few years hence, is rapidly growing up. Her frock of chocolate crepe was trimmed with turquoise blue.

Mary Senate Howes, in gray rough crepe and a black off-the-face hat, was again sporting bangs. Mrs. McKenzie Davidson has them now. She was wearing a black Dalmatian frock with gold braid.

Mrs. Frederick Coleman, wife of the general, was in royal blue brocaded velvet with a matching turban. She certainly should have been weary from answering all of the questions about her son, Freddie, who is due back from Hawaii, a year from February.

Little Laura Recinos, daughter of the Guatemalan Minister, and Senora de Recinos, had on a princess frock of rust wool crepe with an odd but nevertheless attractive brown felt hat that had a swirling handle effect, a la helmet. She might have been one of the debutantes this season, but at the last moment decided to wait until next year.

Off in one corner, all perched on the same hospitable chair were Gertie Pearson, in bright blue, and a saucy quill stuck in her hat (she vowed it was her pen); Virginia Randolph, also in blue with a small black velvet hat; Martha Talley, whose fitted blouse was of a luscious honey-colored satin; and Carrie Roper Fulton, in gold crepe with a wee turban of brown felt.

Across from them, Mrs. Peter Drury, who had only the evening before been gaily "birthday-ed" by all the members of her family, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Homer Pettit, from Fort Belvoir, and Mrs. Samuel Alexander. Two sisters-in-law who are each so attractive in their own right and of very opopsite colorings, are Mrs. James O'Donnell Moran, formerly Senorita Alfaro, who is dark with flashing eyes, and Mrs. Robert Moran, who has hair as fair as spun gold, with brown eyes. The former was in dark red, while blonde Jocelyn was in gray, a perky feather in her matching antelope hat.

Mrs. Laurence Rubel, with a cheery shade of red brightening up her dark ensemble, Mrs. Hal Clagett, in green, who is still living out in Maryland and will continue to do so until after Thanksgiving, and Mrs. Neitah King, in rich black velvet and silver lame, talked over the prospects of this year's festivities.

• • • •

The buffet luncheon was a feast fit for a meeting of kings. There were salads of tomato aspic, chicken, crab, mint and lime jelly, creole rice and shrimp, spinach and mushroom rings and the most delicious cheese biscuits. Then the crowning climax was the "cake," all inscribed with Bette's name, which was not a cake, but a huge round block of ice cream.

Among those there were Margaret McMullen in brown and henna; Mrs. John McMullen, in olive green; Mrs. Frederick Richardson, who can do more without tiring than anyone we know; Mme. Chevalier, Mrs. Jack Hollowell, Mrs. Robert Highfield, her daughter, Dorothy; Mrs. Barge Llewellyn Hartz, who looked more like Bette's older sister than her mother; Jean Grimes, Mary Agnes Young, Mary Lee and Elizabeth Owens, attractive sisters; Mrs. John Dwight Kendall, Betty Cremen, Betty Fieser, and Mrs. Newton Brewer.

Arranging Ball.

Miss Frances Zebley, chairman of the young women's committee for the seventeenth continental ball of the Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter, D. A. # Two Parties Lure Envoys, Society Set

Czechoslovakian Attache Is Host at First Cocktail Fete.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Cocktail parties, one at which the Charge d'Affaires of Czechoslovakia, Mr. Josef Nemecek, was host, and the other, at which the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Smith entertained for Capt. Francisco Lajous, A. R. A., drew members of diplomatic society yesterday afternoon. Many who went first to one met again at the other, and some also had attended the debut party of Miss Carlile Porter.

The counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron and the Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy, Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate, were among those at the Smith party during the early part of the function. The Military and Air Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boetticher, arriving just as Gen. Azcarate was leaving, stopped to tell him how much they had enjoyed the dinner at which he recently entertained a large company of friends at the Army and Navy Country Club and to remark on the delicious Mexican dishes which were served.

The Air Attache of the Italian Embassy and Signora Coppola were in a group with the Naval Attache of the Peruvian Embassy and Senora de Puga, wife of the Air Attache of the Chilean Embassy, who also was there.

Hostess in Black.

Senora de Smith received in a gown of black satin with which she wore diamond earrings and a beautiful brooch in the shape of a basket, set with diamonds. Her black hair was combed simply, back from her face and more notable than what she wore was her gracious smile of welcome.

The room in which she and Commander Smith and the guest of honor received was decorated with large bouquets of white and gold chrysanthemums and pink roses. In the dining room, the table was appointed with a low center bouquet of white chrysanthemums and lighted with red candles in silver candelabra.

Mrs. F. C. Bradley had arrived with Capt. Bradley, Naval Attache of the British Embassy, after attending the debut of Miss Porter and previous to that the luncheon at which Mrs. S. C. Hooper entertained a group of friends at the Chevy Chase Club. Capt. Bradley, who had been having a round of golf in the early afternoon with the Counselor of the British Embassy, Mr. V. A. L. Mallet, was in conversation at one end of the room with Admiral William H. Standley, while Mrs. Bradley stood nearby with Mrs. Thomas Burke, who, with Mr. Burke, had come from the party at the Czechoslovakian Legation. Mrs. Burke wore a costume of black, with a short veil from her small hat, and Mrs. Bradley was in brown, her frock trimmed at the neck and belt with touches of gold. Mrs. Harold Linke wore an attractive small black hat with a crown of blue, and a black frock with flaring white lace collar and cuffs.

Many Diplomats Present.

The Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos were there, expressing pleasure that the party was one where there was time and opportunity to have a real visit with friends. Dr. Olivera Esteves and Senora de Esteves who, with their young son, have recently come from Argentina, also were among the guests.

Among others were the Charge d'Affaires of Argentina, Senor Don Hector Diaz Leguizamon; Mrs. Louis Schapiro and her son, Mr. Mark Schapiro; the Secretary of the Colombian Legation and Senora de Vargas; the First Secretary of the Legation of Honduras and Senora de Caceras, the Commercial Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, the latter in black with a facing of red on her hat; Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Miss Lilita Dawson, who had been at Mr. Nemecek's party earlier in the afternoon; Miss Julie McLean, of the Pan American Union, the former Minister of Venezuela, Senora Arcaya, and the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Don Ricardo J. Siri.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Bailey, jr., of Washington, have arrived at the Greenbrier, in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where they plan to remain for ten days or two weeks. They are accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Grant Thorn and Mrs. Joseph E. Mezzardri, of Baltimore. Mrs. O. F. Douglas, of Washington, is among other arrivals at the resort.

Miss Jane Whittaker Engaged To Wed Lieut. de Lesdernier

Parents Announce Betrothal to Army Officer at Tea; Wedding to Be Held December 29 in the Chapel at Fort Myer.

An engagement of interest to Washington is that of Miss Jane Whittaker, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Frank Whittaker, to Lieut. Louis Frederick de Lesdernier, son of Mrs. F. G. de Lesdernier and the late Col. de Lesdernier, announced yesterday afternoon by her parents.

The announcement was made at the tea given in the Whittaker home on Military road. Miss Whittaker has selected December 29 as the date for her wedding, which will take place in the Fort Myer Chapel. The Rev. William C. Way, of Wausau, Wis., a friend of the family, will perform the ceremony. Miss Cynthia Martin, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. T. L. Martin, of Governor's Island, will be the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Miss Betsy Barnett, Miss Arley-Jane Barnett, Miss Francis Roffe and Miss Virginia Burdette. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the Officers' Club at the Army War College.

Leiupt. de Lesdernier, who was graduated from West Point last June, is stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. This post is named for the famous Sam Houston, a cousin of the grandmother of the bride-to-be. When Lieut. de Lesdernier and his bride return to the post, the quarters they will occupy will be the same in which the Whittakers lived when their daughter was a child.

Among those who assisted at the tea yesterday afternoon were Mrs. J. W. Barnett, Mrs. Giles Merrill, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Mrs. A. W. Roffe, and Mrs. F. G. de Lesdernier.

Roosevelt and Fiancee Attend Tyrolean Party

Franklin Roosevelt, son of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and Miss Ethel du Pont, his fiancee, attended a Tyrolean party held last night at the Agawam Hunt Club in Providence, R. I. The guests wore Alpine costumes and were entertained by 20 native Tyrolean singers.

Mr. Roosevelt and Miss du Pont recently flew to Boston on the American Airlines flagship. They will attend the Harvard-Yale game in New Haven today.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Illicit Romance of College Days Stands Between Girl and Marriage to Man She Loves; She Asks Advice.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Four years ago I left home to enroll for study in one of our great universities. Having a small-town background and not knowing about life, somehow or other I became involved with a man much older than I. I suppose I was flattered by his good looks and the fact that he preferred me to lovelier girls he might have paid attention to. Being green, I thought myself madly in love with him . . . Foolish girl that I was, I thought nothing too great to give for love . . .

• • • •

Then, when after a few months he learned of my plight, instead of offering to marry me as I had thought he surely must do, he coolly walked off, without so much as a word to me. Being young and not knowing anyone in the city, I was in a panic. I couldn't let my family know. Somehow or other I just couldn't. I knew it would just about kill my parents. They were so ambitious for me.

• • • •

Then I became acquainted with a girl who knew the man's family. I learned he was married and had other children. I used the money my parents sent me for school expenses. And when the time finally came I went to a charity ward. While there a maiden aunt of the man became interested in my case and made arrangements to adopt my baby. I was too weak to care much what happened. The day I came out of the hospital everything was arranged and when I got my strength back I returned to school and completed my studies. I came home last summer and no one was any the wiser—not even my parents.

• • • •

Now I have really fallen in love with the nicest young man a girl could ever find. He wants me to marry him early in December and has already purchased the rings. I have known him half my lifetime. He has always gone with girls whose names have never been touched by a breath of scandal—really nice girls they were. Yet I was reared as nicely as any one of them, and now he has fallen in love with me.

• • • •

I know he would never understand if I tell him about myself. I have tried to reason that if he loved me enough he could forgive, but yet I know that men just cannot feel the same toward the girl who has made such a mistake. I have seen my baby twice and she is getting the best of care. This lady loves her as her own. She is a beautiful child and my heart nearly breaks whenever I think of what I have done. Yet I feel she is best off in a good many ways.

• • • •

I love this boy too much to see the love die in front of my very eyes. I couldn't bear that. I have made up my mind to tell him I don't love him—although it breaks my heart—and give him the chance to find the sort of girl he deserves. I cannot marry him with this secret on my mind. Please, will you advise me?

Sincerely, WORRIED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR WORRIED: My advice to you is to meet the challenge of this situation with courage and, above all, with honesty. Do not tell the boy you cannot marry him because you do not love him. That is a craven untruth. Tell him instead, that your own conscience, your innermost conviction of what is right, will not permit you to perpetrate a lie upon him. Tell him that by virtue of his avowed love for you, his avowed desire to make you his wife and cherish and protect you henceforth, you feel he has earned the right to know the truth about yourself. Tell him you feel that your secret will be safe with him. Then tell him why you feel you cannot, in conscience, go through with the marriage.

• • • •

Do not abase yourself unduly in the telling. Do not plead with him to forgive or to understand or to accept you in spite of what has happened. Just tell him the story simply, candidly and with restraint; and honestly, as you have told it here, taking unto yourself without heroics whatever blame you believe attaches to yourself for what happened. But don't shoulder more than your share.

• • • •

When you have finished, leave it to him to make the next move. If he feels your past mistake is full justification for breaking the engagement; if he feels that he has been betrayed, through not having been taken into your confidence earlier in the courtship, don't argue the matter. I maintain you were fully entitled to have kept your own counsel until now. Dignity, self-containment and strength are admirable attributes of character, and I feel sure you have both developed and exercised these qualities in the months and years which have followed your tragic experience.

• • • •

There is a possibility the man may have more worldly understanding than you suppose. There is a possibility he may love you so deeply, so tenderly and so devotedly that he will, with real nobility, wish to make compensation for all that you have suffered at the hands of another man (or beast in the guise of a man). And, on the other hand, it is possible that his love and understanding will prove unequal to the test. But in the latter eventuality you may have the comparative comfort of knowing you did not throw away an opportunity for lasting peace, security and happiness through lacking courage to tell the truth.

• • • •

One last bit of advice: Keep your feelings under perfect control while making known the truth. Don't fling yourself at the man's head or at his feet. Don't speak of your love for him in excessive terms or broken tones. Don't reveal yourself as feeling pitiably dependent upon his charity. The thing to do is to so conduct yourself that you compel his respect for what you are today, no matter how much he may deplore this chapter in your past.

• • • •

If he is endowed with sensitive understanding and some nobility of nature, he will realize that you have consistently regretted your mistake; that you are atoning for it with continual suffering; that you are probably a stronger character in some ways for having experienced such a terrific ordeal, and that what has happened does not necessarily disqualify you for being a most exemplary wife. # U. S. Experts List Hints for Buying Thanksgiving Bird

By the Associated Press.

Government cooks today handed out some hints to the housewife on buying and cooking her Thanksgiving turkey.

"A housewife," said a bulletin from the Bureau of Home Economics, "can learn to judge turkeys on the counter for herself. If she wants a light-weight tender young turkey, less than a year old, she should ask for a 'young hen' or a 'young tom.'"

Recommended points to look for in a good bird outlined by the experts were:

The Government estimates a record crop of 20,000,000 turkeys this year—a third more than last year and about 1,000,000 more than in 1932 and 1933.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

MARGARET SULLAVAN, the movie star, is back acting away on the stage and, to hear her tell it, is darned glad of it! As the shining light of the Ferber-Kaufman play, "Stage Door," she has the role of a young trouper who refuses to leave Broadway for Hollywood gold—and Maggie actually seems to be living the part.

ALICE HUGHES.

The funny thing is, naturally, that the Sullavan girl has a huge supply of movie boodle, garnered in the past three years, but she's still all for the dear old stage drammer.

She doesn't care much for the press, either. I'm a harmless enough soul, but she chewed gum at me viciously in her dressing room while she delivered herself of fiery opinions on the stage, the screen and their denizens. She loves to chew gum, and does so with a remarkably sound technique.

"I've never had one single moment of happiness or satisfaction out of making movies," says La Sullavan. "It's too huge and disorganized."

But she's a frank and honest girl, is Maggie. She says she went to Hollywood because the theater offered her nothing but a row of disheartening flops—that she wanted the security movie money could bring. And, why not, in that most precarious of all businesses—acting for pay, of any?

An interesting girl, this Margaret, now happy in a big hit on our Forty-fifth street. But such a forceful character that I left the presence without remembering to ask why she spells Sullavan with an A!

Feet, Hands Beautiful By Hollywood Players

Hollywood glamour girls are giving as much attention nowadays to beautifying their extremities as they do to keeping their faces and hair at the high beauty mark.

Jean Muir, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor and Inez Courtney are among those who pay particular attention to their feet and hands and appear regularly for the treatments to those parts of their anatomy. Penetrating oils and violet rays, together with gentle massage of the hands and feet, they claim, result in beneficial toning up of the whole system.

No more. Black is now handled so cleverly, with dashes of color or bright rows of braid, that even the most conservative maters now smile as it passes on daughter's back on the way to the sophomore hop or the freshman pillow fight.

New Notion of Make-Up for Hair And Nails Inspires Naturalness

Bleached Blondes Are Becoming Brown or Black-Haired Again and Those With Platinum Tresses Return to Natural Golden Locks.

By Ethel Ehlen.

BE YOURSELF—it is the vogue now. This applies to the new ideas in make-up, hair and fingernails, as well as personality. The trend toward femininity which has given the fashion world such a jolt this season is inspiring women to be natural. Bleached blondes are becoming brown or black-haired again, and those who have been platinumed are returning to their natural golden locks.

The same is true of complexions. It is obvious that skins should be harmonious with hair tints and it follows that nails should echo the same general color theme. If you are fair-haired the current idea stressing a pink glow or a modernized version of the old peaches-and-cream complexion is your solution for a smart and becoming face. Brunettes likewise are advised to express their natural dark coloring and employ cosmetics that tone in with their dark skins and hair. The silver-tinted woman and the one whose hair is entirely gray or pure white also come in for this natural make-up whim. For them, the matter is of special significance.

To make the most of your blondeness, experts suggest the following procedure when applying your complexion for the day: a foundation lotion in a pinkish shade called peachbloom with face powder in the same tone. Geranium rouge and lipstick are the effective complements for these. To make your eyes outstanding, apply blue luminous eyeshadow. Eyes, by the way, should be particularly featured this season, because of the high-hat, off-the-face mode.

Brunettes add to their allure by keeping their complexions dark, accented with brighter tones. A striking make-up has been designed for this purpose, consisting of maresque foundation and powder, red raspberry rouge, red velvet lipstick, jade-green eyeshadow and terra-cotta nail groom.

For the titian-haired girl, who is usually troubled with freckles, her problem is especially important. For this type authorities suggest a terra-cotta foundation lotion, peachbloom powder, terra-cotta rouge (which covers up the freckles and gives a warm, subtle look to the skin), Chinese red lipstick and emerald-green eyeshadow.

Make-up for the woman with gray or snow-white hair should be extremely subtle. It should lend subtlety and warmth without suggesting garish contrasts. A dark foundation and powder are the modern manner of treating the matter in preference to the older idea of white powder and pale rouge.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Parents often become worried and disturbed whenever one of the youngsters has an earache or a discharge from that region. In such a situation we instantly recognize that the middle ear is infected; that bacteria probably have made their way from the throat along the Eustachian tube into this walled space.

While the condition need not prove alarming, yet it must receive attention as the infection may become chronic and persist for weeks or months. The menace of the whole business lies in the fact that the diseased space within the skull resembles somewhat one of the head sinuses and nests of pus producing bacteria may flourish therein for a long time. Furthermore, mastoid cells within the bone that lies behind the ear may become involved, necessitating surgical intervention.

The infection usually develops following a cold with inflammation of the throat, nasal passages and sinuses, and it is quite common after scarlet fever, measles, or diphtheria. The pain may not be severe, and the first sign may be a spot of pus on the pillow and a gummy discharge in the canal which dries as scaly crusts.

Every physician knows that inflammation in the nose and throat may at any time communicate itself to the inner ear. The price of safety is careful watching of the drum, particularly if pain is complained of. Hearing will rarely be in danger if the physician, on detecting evidences of pressure on the drum from within, will make a tiny opening; thus permitting the pus to escape. This is far wiser than to allow it to rupture spontaneously.

Unfortunately, the disease will not often heal itself. A cold, as a rule, runs its course. There may be a slight temperature for a few days, but after a relatively short period the patient recovers and is as good as new. But this is not the case with disease that may produce deafness. The one afflicted may be up and about carrying on his regular duties, but the discharge—in far too many instances—will continue unless special precautions are exercised. We must make certain that the drainage is free and unimpeded, otherwise spread to the neighboring structures may take place.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE'S A LADY who finds that any old plant will just split itself to grow for her. Naturally she takes advantage of that in planning her home decorations.

For instance, in her dining room she has a window ledge where she always keeps something red in bloom. The rug on the floor is a rag one—gray mostly with flecks of green here and there. White walls, maple furniture—can't you just see what a livable, homey sort of room that is?

But she's in need of new curtains and draperies and asks our advice about the colors to use. Also she has a maple love seat that she uses here in this dining room—what color should the cover be? And would we suggest using chair pads on the dining chairs? What would we have on the shelves of an open cupboard • • • things that will also be useful in serving?

We'd have crisp white tie-back curtains first, with draperies in quite a clear bright shade of plain green chintz. Then an old-time calico patterned red chintz for the love seat and the chair pads (a good idea, by the way). For the open shelf cupboard, nothing could be nicer than scenic plates, in white or ivory, with the design in red.

Curves Back, 'Streamlined' Figure Passe

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Curves are coming back and the "streamlined" figure is passe.

You may take the word of Sue Helvarg for this. Miss Sue, as she prefers to be known, operates the Models' Bureau, which supplies models to artists and photographers, and she gave to the United Press this, her version of what the 1937 beauty should be: Height, 5 feet 8 inches; weight, 115 to 120 pounds; bust, 34 inches; waist, 26 inches, hips, 35; hair, light brown; eyes, hazel.

"In other words," she explained, "the ideal beautiful woman of 1937 will be more feminine. The rail-type, streamlined, boyish figure is giving away to curves."

Changing fashions are responsible for the return to a modified version of the sinuous figure which was so popular several decades ago. Women's clothes are styled with more flare, she pointed out, and require "something to fill them out."

The coming year, said the dark-eyed young businesswoman, who is as attractive as most of the models in her office, will find a greater demand for taller women "with flowing lines."

Novel Ideas For Holiday Table Given

Something New Up Sleeve Suggested for Smart Turkey Feast.

Cranberry Marsh Ice Proposed as Fitting and Different.

By Rebekah Blake.

WHEN THE family gathers around the Thanksgiving table, anticipating the bountiful feast that is to come, be a wise hostess and have something new "up your sleeve" along with the habitual turkey and pumpkin. You've probably been wondering just what that something new will be, and you must have it, since your Aunt Jane is to be the guest of honor, and she is an excellent cook.

First, the stunning table setting you've planned with your new crystal goblets, freshly polished silverware, and your best linen service will take on smart effectiveness without detracting from its dignity if you use "turkey" place favors. Make these individual turkey novelties with a marshmallow body, with fan-shaped tail of candied pineapple slice stuck on with toothpicks, a long gobbler neck devised of small raisins strung on a pipe cleaner, and pipe cleaners for legs.

Cranberry marsh ice is an important new idea for impressing relatives and pleasing guests. It is a tempting solution to offset the heaviness which is likely to be the besetting sin of a Thanksgiving dinner. This ice is easily made in an electric refrigerator, and be sure that you have plenty in the kitchen if you hint that there is more, for your guests will take you up pronto on the second-helping idea.

Cranberry Marsh Ice.

2 pack-ettes (½ pound) marshmallows
1 cup cranberry juice (slightly sweetened)
1 cup water
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Heat the marshmallows and ¼ cup cranberry juice in saucepan over a low flame. Fold over and over until marshmallows are about three-quarters melted. Remove from flame and continue folding until mixture is smooth and fluffy. Let mixture cool and then add remaining ¾ cup cranberry juice, water and lemon juice, and blend well. Place in the freezing tray of automatic refrigerator, which has been turned to the lowest degree of its cold control. Stir several times during the freezing period.

Pomegranate Cocktail.
Peanut and Bacon Canapes
Roast Turkey

Giblet Gravy
Sweet Potato Pumpkins
Turnip Croquettes
Creamed Onions With Broccoli Blossoms
Salad Greens With Roquefort
Frozen Pumpkin Pie
Assorted Fruit Nuts and Raisins
Hot Rolls
Coffee

Sweet Potato Pumpkins.

Shape mashed, well-seasoned sweet potatoes like small pumpkins, using about one-quarter cup for each. Score like a pumpkin and brush with egg yolk. This may be done some time before they will be needed. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 20 minutes or until hot and brown. Insert strip of green pepper or parsley for a stem in each.

Frozen Pumpkin Pie.

Put 16 marshmallows in top of double boiler over hot water. When partly melted add 2 cups sifted steamed pumpkin, two-thirds cup brown sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Mix 1½ teaspoons ginger with 1½ teaspoons cinnamon and 2 tablespoons boiling water and add to marshmallows with 4 tablespoons orange juice. When marshmallows are nearly melted remove from fire and add 4 egg yolks. Beat well and place in tray of mechanical refrigerator to chill. When mixture is cold and slightly stiffened fold in lightly 1½ cups cream beaten stiff and freeze until firm. Just before serving spread in a baked pie shell and cover with meringue made by beating 6 egg whites until stiff but still shiny and folding in 6 tablespoons sugar. Place the pie under the broiler flame for a moment until brown, watching carefully, and serve at once.

Brush for Lipstick Advised by Artist

So many girls try to build up their lips by wielding the lipstick over them in the usual fashion, but find the results disastrous. From Perc Westmore, movie make-up adviser, comes the advice that the thing to do is use a thin rather stiff brush. That's what he does when he changes the mouths of the movie girls.

Instead of applying the stick directly to the lips, work some of the color off on a lipstick brush and then sketch your new mouth as though you were painting a picture.

Cranberries in New Dress for Feast

When your Aunt Jane, who is a very good cook, is coming to Thanksgiving dinner you want to have something new and different in the meal. Cranberry marsh ice is the ideal supplement for the turkey. It gives the cranberry flavor that is usually present in the form of sauce and furnishes something refreshing with the heavy meal.

Irene Reardon Wins Post Prize For Cranberry-Pot Roast Recipe

Her Formula for Combining Meat With Fruit Adjudged the Best of Many Submitted in Contest for Washington Housewives.

IT'S SURPRISING the large number of ways that cranberries may be used in the menu. In this week's cranberry recipe contest many unusual recipes were received.

The second prize of $2 was won by Mrs. Henry T. Boswell, 3833 Windom place northwest, for her recipe for cranberry muffins; the third prize, $1 was awarded to Miss Anna Belle Estes, of Sperryville, Va., for a recipe for cranberry bananas. The fourth prize, $1, went to Miss Mildred Pickens, 1725 H street northwest, for cranberry punts for tea, and the fifth prize of $1 was awarded to Helen A. Stanberger, 1954 Columbia road northwest, for her recipe for rose apple salad.

Pot Roast With Cranberries.

Three pounds of top round, 3 tablespoons fat, 1 pint cranberries, 1 pint of water. Dredge the meat with flour and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Heat the fat in a saucepan and brown the meat well on all sides. Cook cranberries in water until very soft, then rub through a sieve. If too thick, add enough water to make a thin puree. Sweeten slightly and cook for a few minutes. Put in a pan with meat and simmer until meat is tender. The cranberries will cook to a thick sauce, which can be served with the meat instead of gravy. French fried potatoes are good with this.

Mrs. Boswell's recipe follows:

Cranberry Muffins.

½ cup butter
1-3 cup granulated sugar
1 egg
2 cups bread flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup milk
1 cup uncooked cranberries which are cut in half
½ cup finely broken English walnut meats

Cream the butter and sugar and add the milk to the beaten egg. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt and add to the mixture alternately with the milk and egg. Lastly, add the cranberries and nuts. Put the mixture in muffin tins and bake in a hot oven about 400 degrees F. for 20 to 25 minutes.

Cranberry Bananas.

1 quart of ripe cranberries
1 cup of water
4 bananas
1¾ cups of sugar
1 lemon

Wash the cranberries and cover with cold water. Cook rapidly for ten minutes. Press through the sieve. Peel the bananas and cut in half lengthwise. Place in the baking dish and add the juice of the lemon. Grate the rind lightly and add to hot cranberry mixture together with the sugar. Pour over the bananas and bake slowly until they are tender. Serve as a dessert or as an accompaniment to meat.

Miss Pickens' recipe follows:

Cranberry Punts for Tea.

1 cup cranberry sauce (whole berries)
1 tablespoon brown sugar

Mix, let sugar dissolve, drain all juice off. Make pie crust, adding one teaspoon shortening. Make little balls of pie crust dough. Roll out the size of 50-cent pieces, spread with butter, put a little cranberry on top, bring edges up like a draw string, press together lightly enough to hold. Either bake on cake rack or plunge in hot fat until golden brown. Let cool on brown paper and serve with India tea.

Helen Stanberger's recipe:

Rose Apple Salad.

1 quart cranberries
¾ pound sugar
1 pint of water
Grated rind of a lemon
6 apples
3 heads lettuce (use the pale center leaves only)
1 cup mayonnaise (very cold)
1 cup whipped cream (very cold)
2 ounces or about 6 dates
2 ounces broken nut meats
2 ounces raisins

Pick over cranberries removing stems and soft ones. Cook in the water until all the berries have popped. Run through collander. Add sugar and cook until boiling point. Remove from stove and cool. Then add grated lemon rind.

While above is cooking, core and pare apples, being careful not to remove the blossom end of the apple. Mix 1 ounce of the nuts with dried fruit and fill apple cavities with this. Place in covered baking dish with cranberry syrup. Bake until soft. Remove apples and chill. Also the syrup which remains.

Beat mayonnaise carefully into the whipped cream. Grind or crush fine the remaining ounce of nuts. Add about 1 tablespoon of the syrup to the whipped cream mixture, or enough to color it.

Arrange the chilled apples on plates, surround with lettuce leaves, curving the lettuce against the apples, rose fashion. Serve garnished with chipped cream mixture and sprinkle with ground nuts.

Prizes Announced For Best Recipes Employing Celery

Celery is inexpensive and plentiful just now and it may be used in numerous ways, as in salads, creamed with oysters, in soup, baked, in appetizers, and as a relish. A dash of celery gives zip to almost any dish.

Because this is a good season for celery, it has been chosen as the subject of our recipe contest for this week.

If you have an interesting recipe using celery, copy it neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, foods editor of The Washington Post, so that she will receive it not later than Saturday morning.

The cash prizes for this week's winners are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

Child Chats

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

COMING into the house one rainy afternoon Mrs. X was horrified and annoyed to find her small daughters and two or three of their small friends dressed up in her best clothes. They had rifled her bureau drawers and cupboards and helped themselves to her party dresses, evening slippers, hats and costume jewelry. They had even used her cosmetics and were heavily rouged and powdered.

Playing at being grown-up was such a delightful and absorbing game that they did not even hear Mrs. X's approach, and so were caught red-handed.

On thinking it over, Mrs. X decided that the best way to guard her rights was to provide a counter attraction. With the help of the neighbors, who had also suffered from the "dressing-up" craze, she got together a box of old party finery. Assembling it proved to be fun even for the mothers. There must be enough dresses to go around and a few left over to provide a choice. There must also be enough shoes and a reasonable number of hats.

One mother donated a box of old artificial flowers, another a quantity of cheap and outmoded costume jewelry.

The whole collection was placed in a couple of large cartons and these were stored in the house which boasted an extra closet not in constant use. Henceforth the mothers' wardrobes were left untouched.

Beat until light, line potato shells with the mixture, put 1 egg in each cavity and bake at 350 degrees F. until white is firm. Cover with remaining potato mixture, brush with egg yolk and bake until potato is brown.

"ALL-BRAN KEEPS ME IN SHAPE EVERY DAY"

"When I had eaten a heavy breakfast, I would feel logy. After a couple of days of this, I would have to take a laxative.

"One morning I had a dish of ALL-BRAN. Believe me, it beats any laxative, as it keeps me in shape every day."—Wm. C. Billings, 1330 19th St., Denver, Colorado.

Why put up with half-sick days, when a delicious cereal will make you feel so good? Because ALL-BRAN has "bulk" which absorbs moisture within the body. Then gently sponges out your system, wipes away the listlessness, the "blues," the headaches.

Scientific tests prove this natural food is both safe and effective—worlds better than taking patent medicines. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Take it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Horizontal Paneling Effective As Contrast

The housewife who hankers after the modern, but has some old possessions that she wants to keep has an interesting problem on her hands. The room itself in such a case is important.

The new horizontal paneling is an effective background in a modern room, contrasting pleasantly with old furnishings and toning in with the new. It may be used on all four walls, or on one, two or three.

Prelates Score Despotic Trend Of Old World

Board of National Catholic Welfare Conference Sees Faith Undermined.

The archbishops and bishops who form the administrative board of National Catholic Welfare Conference last night issued a vigorous broadside at "despotisms" in the old world and the new which have "robbed men of the gift of faith."

No countries were mentioned, but it appeared that the American bishops had Germany, Spain and Mexico in mind.

The statement said in part:

"In the world-wide conflict of today between two diametrically opposed philosophies of life, the spiritual and the supernatural on the one side, and the materialistic on the other, there is no place for indifference or neutrality.

"The force of atheism and neo-paganism with their offspring Communism and despotism are attempting to rob life of all that is spiritual and supernatural. The fate of western civilization which is rooted in Christian principles is bound up with the outcome of this struggle.

Subjected to Force.

"The dictatorships in the old world and in the new which have robbed men of the gift of faith, if spiritual and intellectual freedom, have subjected them to a regime of fear and force.

"In every quarter of the world where the Christian order has been destroyed, the process by which this was achieved was always the same. There were promises in one case of a larger share in the powers of government, in another of a restoration of national sovereignty and prestige, in still another of a juster distribution of property and wealth. Class antagonisms were aroused, the regime of law was set aside, men were encouraged to yield to the herd passion for murder and destruction and to the herd instinct for blind submission to a leader.

"Grim experience has given the lie to the promises and pretensions of all the founders of the modern despotisms. Those who are compelled to live under their tyranny have not the right to think, to read or to pray, except by the grace and favor of their despotic masters. The people fear and are feared.

Privacy Invaded.

"The prying eyes and the strong hand of government follow them into every detail of their private lives. All the natural instincts, friendship, family affection, reverence for what is noble and true, must be subordinated to the over-reaching claims of society.

"Fear of domestic enemies begets munistic or totalitarian state befear of outside foes until every comcomes a mere agency for the maintenance of greater and more oppressive military establishments. Militarism flourishes as it never has flourished before and nobody can foretell when the spark may be set which will involve the world in a universal conflagration of death and destruction."

A program for correcting the evils rampant in the world today, the statement, may be found in the encyclicals which the Popes have been issuing for a century and a half.

Two Bandits Take $352 From Market

Two unmasked bandits late last night robbed Michael Amaly, clerk at the New Hampshire Market, New Hampshire avenue and T street northwest, of $352 at pistolpoint.

The hoodlums entered his store as he was checking over the day's receipts. They escaped in an automobile bearing a District license tag.

Amaly, according to police, obtained the number of the car. The money was in bills and silver.

Sound Movies Record Heart of Unborn Babe

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—Science has projected sound movies into a new sphere.

The beat of an unborn babe's heart was heard by 400 doctors and nurses in a "talkie" audience at the Chicago Lying In Hospital last night. They witnessed movies of three difficult obstetrical cases. At one point they saw a physician apply a stethoscope to a mother. Over the sound track of the film came the beat of the infant's heart—just as the doctor heard it through his instrument.

Bendix Strike Parley To Be Renewed Today

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Conferees attempting to reach a settlement which will end the "sit-down" siege of the Bendix products plant, now in its fourth day, adjourned tonight without reaching an agreement. The negotiators will reconvene at 10 a. m. tomorrow in an effort to reach an agreement which will permit reopening of the automobile and aviation parts plant.

Irish Fascists Sail To Aid Spain Rebels

Dublin (Saturday), Nov. 21 (AP).—Gen. Eoin O'Duffy, head of the Fascist "Greenshirts," and 40 young men slipped quietly aboard a mail boat for Liverpool early today, en route to Spain to fight on the side of the Spanish Fascists.

Their destination, it was reported reliably, was the Catalonian front.

Ahead of this contingent was a group of ten under the command of Col. Thomas Carew, who left Dublin Saturday. The remainder of O'Duffy's so-called "Irish Brigade"—said to number 1,000—was awaiting notice to sail.

Cattle Workers Vote Strike for 25% Raise

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—Members of the Chicago Livestock Handlers Union voted tonight to strike in support of their demand for a 25 per cent wage increase.

Ben Brown, president of Union Local 517, said the membership, whose strength he estimated at 400, voted unanimously for the strike.

Brown said the strike call would become effective Monday unless the union stockyards and transit company, employers of most of the livestock handlers, accedes to the union's demands.

Sasscer Seeks Law to Prevent Bonds Rackets

Prince Georges Senator Would Put All Cases in Hands of Prosecutor.

Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland State Senate, announced last night he would introduce a bill in the January session of the Legislature designed to eliminate any possibility of a recurrence of the alleged police-bonding scandal now under investigation in Prince Georges County.

The proposed bill, he said, would make it illegal for anyone except the State's attorney either to withdraw or change a warrant.

Such a bill, he said, would center the responsibility in cases where charges are changed in one official. At present any one of the 40 or more justices of the peace in the county has the authority to adjust charges without consulting higher officials.

Sworn affidavits submitted to the Keystone Automobile Club have linked justices of the peace, bondsmen and police in the "bargain-fine" system which is alleged to have relieved Washington motorists of thousands of dollars.

One justice of the peace, Herbert J. Moffat, of Hyattsville, has been named defendant in a suit for $140.

Woodrow Brice, colored, 804 O street northwest, claims through his attorneys, that he paid Moffet $151.70 for fine and collateral on a charge of exceeding 60 miles an hour.

When the case went to court, Brice alleges, the charge had been changed to exceeding 45 miles an hour and collateral of $11.70 was forfeited. He claims that Moffat is liable for the $140 which is unaccounted for.

Sasscer, who is considered a possible candidate for Governor, is the nominal leader of the Democratic Party in the county.

He has been reportedly perturbed by the sudden expose of alleged malpractices among members of the police department, who are all political appointees. Until last night, however, he had declined to comment on the situation.

Odds Against War 10-1.

London, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—The odds are 10 to 1 against a war during the next six months between any two European powers or between a European country and Russia, Turkey or Japan, Lloyd's announced today.

G. W. Union Opens Debating Season

The George Washington University Union, student political forum, last night held its inaugural meeting in Stockton Hall, and debated a proposed Constitutional amendment providing for more liberal labor, health and national resource conservation legislation.

Wreck Call Costs Practical Joker $250

Kansas City, Nov. 20 (AP).—Willie Carson, 20, staged a "free" show for three friends and himself by telephoning police a train had been wrecked and several passengers killed—but it cost him a $250 fine in Municipal Court today.

"I laughed and laughed when I saw all those policemen (five cars) and ambulance drivers (two) looking for the wreck," Carson said.

Jury Studying Townsendites' Contempt Case

Grand Panel Hears Rep. Bell Charge Pension Planners Refused to Testify.

The District Grand Jury began yesterday—and concluded in a brief session—its consideration of contempt charges brought against Dr. Francis E. Townsend, head of the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., after he walked out of a House investigating committee hearing last spring, flatly refusing to remain and submit to questioning.

In addition to Dr. Townsend's "walk out" the grand jury considered the cases of the Rev. Clinton Wunder, D. D., former director of the New York unit of the Townsend organization, and John B. Kiefer, one-time head of the Chicago, Ill., office, both of whom allegedly refused to obey House Committee subpenas calling for their appearance.

Rep. C. Jasper Bell, of Missouri, chairman of the House committee that was empowered to inquire into old age pension organiaztions, was the first witness to go before the grand jury. Presumably he told that Townsend was called to testify, and that he walked out in a huff when the questioning riled him.

Following him went J. O. Bowen, who served the subpenas on Wunder and Kiefer, and then came K. K. Johnson and E. B. Clark, official stenographers, and William A. Weber, a deputy sergeant-at-arms of the House. In addition, the official transcript of the hearing when the elderly Townsend stalked out of the committee room was introduced.

A grand jury report is expected next week.

Saito Says Europe Wants Peace Kept

New York, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—The outbreak of a great war in Europe is delayed at present by common knowledge that in modern major wars all parties are losers, Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito said tonight. He said his country abhorred war as much as any other and was trying to solve its problems by expanding its industry and foreign trade.

He grouped Japan with nations which are combatting communism, a reference reminding observers of recent reports of an alliance between Japan and Germany supposedly against Russia. He said:

"In the working out of her national destiny, Japan further is confronted with the problem of Communist inroads. To combat communism is a cause common to many countries in the East and West. Many recent activities of Japan may be elucidated from this solicitude."

Saito addressed a group of textilers.

New Factor in Tangle Over Green Millions

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—A three-day effort to untangle the complexities of the problem of disposing of the millions left by the late Col. E. H. R. Green ended today with the introduction of a new problem:

"Will States interested in being claimants to the millions in inheritance taxes submit to New York jurisdiction?"

Surrogate Harry E. Owen adjourned the hearings until December 2, in order to serve five States with a notice of a motion for the determination of inheritance taxes due New York State.

Italy, Germany, Japan Warn Russia on Spain

Rome, Nov. 20 (AP).—A Fascist warning to Soviet Russia that Italy, Germany and Japan will "actively" combat any attempt to set up a Communist center on Spanish soil went out from Rome tonight.

The three powers, authoritative quarters said, would meet any such attempt by mobilizing their anti-Communist defenses from a passive into an active state.

1 Dead, 2 Hurt As Fire Truck Loses Wheel

Baltimore, Nov. 20 (AP).—A front wheel snapped off a speeding fire truck today, causing the vehicle to lunge into a tree and kill Fireman Lawrence F. Wheatley, 37, who was riding on the rear.

The crash injured Herbert W. McCauley and Milton C. Helmling, who were hurried to a hospital for treatment. Two other firemen riding on the truck escaped injury.

Something went wrong with the truck as it was going down a grade returning from a fire. The wheel came off as it passed down the grade and mounted an upgrade. Wheatley was thrown off and apparently was killed instantly.

2 Die in Tug Blast; 2 Missing, 5 Burned

Port Arthur, Tex., Nov. 20 (AP).—Two men were burned to death, two were missing and five others were burned, three seriously, in a gasoline fire which swept the tugboat, Chief, at the Atlantic Refining Co.'s docks here today.

Capt. A. W. Laurents, of Port Arthur, master of the vessel, and tenth man aboard, was first reported missing, but escaped by leaping overboard.

Twe bodies were recovered aboard the vessel early tonight by firemen. They were so badly burned identification was impossible.

Authorities expressed fear the two missing members of the crew, Robert Pronperrie, fireman, and Paul Harris, Negro cook, were also trapped below decks when the little harbor boat was swiftly enveloped in flaming gasoline.

The five who were burned fought their way to safety through water covered with blazing fluid.

Baldwin Denies Guilt in Slaying

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 20 (AP).—Charles Buffington Baldwin, 1-year-old former U. S. Army aviator, leaned upon a cane today before Magistrate O. M. Phipps and pleaded not guilty to a charge of slaying his wealthy mother, Mrs. Juliette B. Enslow, 63.

A servant found Mrs. Enslow dead on the morning of October 17. She was the widow of one of Huntington's wealthiest men and daughter of the city's first mayor. Baldwin was a son by a former marriage.

The son was arrested a week later.

Two District Officers Re-elected by A. A. A.

Detroit, Nov. 20 (AP).—The American Automobile Association, at its thirty-fourth convention here, re-elected Thomas P. Henry, of Detroit, as president today.

George W. White, Washington, was re-elected treasurer, and Russell E. Singer, Washington, was retained as general manager.

Police Gas Grid Rioters.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 20 (AP).—Police threw tear-gas bombs tonight to disperse a large crowd near the Ohio State University campus amid a barrage of fruit, eggs and vegetables. The melee started when a group of men tried to force their way into a theater, breaking the glass fronts, toward the end of a home-coming rally for the Ohio State football team, which meets Michigan tomorrow.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Plant Life Meter

Rube Goldberg would tip his hat in admiration to Dr. E. D. McAlister, of the Smithsonian Institution's division of organism and radiation, if he saw the doctor's new apparatus for measuring the growth of a plant, minute by minute.

To say that it's the most complicated contrivance we've ever seen would be putting it mildly—like remarking, "I hear Roosevelt managed to beat Landon." There are electric lights, jars of waters, a motor-driven fan, a rainbow-glittering prism of rock salt, a galvanometer and a miniature air-conditioning chamber, with innumerable rubber hoses, thermostats and an air pump, all put together—well, frankly, we don't know how McAlister ever got the stuff together.

The plant being measured is only a few inches tall—its roots extend through a cork into a bottle of nutrient solution—but the outfit just spreads itself over the rest of the table with all the impressiveness of a piece of junk that, one has been told, comes as close to holding the secret of plant life as anything thus far contrived.

Plants, as you probably know, grow by taking carbon dioxide from the air and water from the soil, which are turned into carbohydrates. McAlister's "life meter"—that's our name for it—measures the amount of carbon dioxide consumed by the plant minute by minute. Plants will take in carbon dioxide only as long as there is light. McAlister's mechanism is so sensitive that he has only to switch off the electric light or pass his hand in front of the bulb for a drop to be registered.

Our visit to the division of organisms and radiation was prompted by the announcement that tomorrow morning's Office of Education-Smithsonian Institution broadcast will deal with the work of the division. One of the more interesting experiments to be described in the broadcast will be Dr. E. S. Johnston's work measuring the growth effects of differently colored lights—red, blue, green and yellow.

Edison on Louis

The Navy's new assistant secretary probably knows less about prizefighting than any man in the service, and yet he was one of that select few who won betting on the Louis-Schmeling fight.

Edison was taken to the fight by Arthur Walsh, assistant administrator of the Federal Housing Administration and also a vice president in Edison's company. Walsh, knowing his boss's ignorance of prizefighting, offered to bet Edison even money that Louis would beat Schmeling. Edison who, apparently knew his Walsh, shied at the bait. Walsh then offered Edison two to one on Louis and was taken up. The rest, of course, is history.

When Edison's appointment was announced a group of his employes rigged up a battleship complete with wooden guns and flying pennants and drove it up to the window outside his office. Edison thought it great fun but couldn't be induced to pose for a picture in the imitation battleship.

WPA unionists will send a questionnaire seeking specific details about possible dismissals to Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. A mass "protest" meeting is also to be called soon and Hopkins, very definitely, will not be invited to speak. Incidentally has that $20 bill discovered by one Walker-Johnson building supervisor been claimed yet?

Loyalty

Elbert Hubbard, evidently, did not say the last word on loyalty. The little item in this column reporting that J. Edgar Hoover had tacked up Hubbard's quotation on loyalty above the signing-in book in the fingerprint section brings this reply from someone who signs himself "N'est-ce pas?—Agriculture."

On Hubbard's advice to speak loyally of a man when you're working for him, our correspondent writes, "If a man who is in charge of employes has the proper qualifications he is always well spoken of by his employes. If employes do not speak well of him, rest assured he has not the qualifications for the position he occupies.

"The man who is fair in his relations with his employes, who understands his own work and is fully capable of doing it and of directing others, can always command the respect of his employes and they will always speak well of him. It takes two people to make a 'fuss' and in 90 per cent of the Government cases where there are 'fusses' the fault is with the supervisory officer and not with the employe. It would seem that instead of making so many rules for employes that a few regulations should be applied to employers and they should be expected to live up to certain requirements and qualifications."

If WPA workers can uncover Indian blood treaties, maybe they could be put to work to solve a little problem that has worried us of late—namely, What makes railroad workers so sentimental? At least they've seemed sentimental to us ever since officials at the Railroad Retirement Board got to telling us of the tearful letters of thanks sent in by railroad workers who are blessed with a retirement pension.

Latest thing of the kind was this prayer inclosed in a letter from James T. Hurt, of Walton, Ky., to R. B. Bronson, the board secretary: "May God in Heaven touch the hearts of the members of the Supreme Court so that their sympathies may be with us old and worn-out men and thus allow this retirement act to remain in force many, many good years to come!" Or can the whole business be propaganda?

He Blows Out Electric Lights and Lights Them With Match

Dr. Phillipps Thomas demonstrates the Breath Relay, an application of the phototube or electric eye, by means of which it is possible to blow out all the lights of a room and then light them with a match. The demonstration took place at the meeting of the Washington Board of Trade at the Willard Hotel last night. Moisture of the breath condenses on a specially prepared surface, making it a partial conductor for an almost vanishing amount of electrical energy and changing that surface from the "no current" to the "current passing" value. This lights a cold cathode grid glow tube which in turn causes a relay to put out the lights. So sensitive is the apparatus that the lights can be turned on by bringing a lighted match near the phototube connected in the same circuit. Both the cold cathode grid glow tube and the hot cathode tube, used in the stroboglow, are Westinghouse research developments.

Citizens Indorse New Route for Takoma Buses

Association Hears a Report From Waters, Then Asks Order by P. U. C.

A resolution requesting the Public Utilities Commission to consider ordering re-routing of the present Takoma Park express buses by way of Fifth street to Grant circle, thence over New Hampshire avenue to Ninth street, and from Ninth street west on Constitution avenue, was adopted by the Takoma Park, Maryland-D. C. Citizens' Association last night.

The organization met in the Takoma Park branch library, and acted after hearing an extended report by Chester E. Waters, chairman of its Public Utilities Committee and town councilman.

Present route of the buses over Thirteenth street takes them through a crowded, bus-saturated area, the organization said. There is less traffic on Ninth street, it held, and consequently transportation would be faster.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and the Ninth Street Associates were asked to co-operate in the parking and light problems if the re-routing is ordered as a trial during the holiday rush season.

The association emphasized that its stand against the removal of the trolley line on Kennedy avenue and Third streets remained unchanged.

William McK. Clayton was recommended for the office of People's Counsel, and Phil W. Huck, president of the Takoma Volunteer Fire Department, was made a member of the association.

Ex-Senator Dies In Seattle Home

Former Senator Elijah Sherman Grammer, 68, who represented the State of Washington in the short session of Congress in December, 1932, died at his home in Seattle, early yesterday, the Associated Press reported.

A veteran of the Air Corps in the World War, he was appointed as a Republican to complete the unexpired term of the late Senator Wesley L. Jones.

Senator Grammer was a native of Missouri, a Presbyterian, a Mason and a Shriner. Before his air service, he was a member of the Spruce Products Division of the War Department. His appointment to the Senate came from Gov. Roland H. Hartley.

Lecturer Recounts Thrills of Flight Across the Pacific

Thrills of a flight across the Pacific in one of the giant new Clipper planes, including seeing a robot pilot steer the 26-ton flying boat while human pilots' hands rested in their laps, were described in a lecture before the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall last night by William Burke Miller, of the National Broadcasting Co.

Miller, who flew the 8,000 miles to Manila and back aboard the Philippine Clipper, had the unique experience of broadcasting "out of today into yesterday" after the plane had crossed the International Dateline, and received a radiogram on Friday morning requesting a broadcast for Thursday afternoon.

The great ship flew the vast distance without mishap. Even when one of the four powerful motors failed the crew were nonchalant. If necessary they could operate the ship with only two. Operation of the Giant Clipper resembles that of a surface vessel—it contains a "flying bridge," engineers' cabin, lounge and galley where food and hot coffee are served. The engineers inspect their four motors at night with a giant flashlight pointed through cabin windows onto the motors out on the wings.

Following Miller's lecture, Robert Fulton, of Pan-American Airways, described his experiences as a member of the advance party sent out to establish bases on Midway and Wake Islands, and showed motion pictures of the difficulties involved and the life led by these airway pioneers.

Trade Board Agog as Expert Puts Neutrons Through Tricks

Research Engineer Plays 'Happy Days Are Here Again' With Beam; Shows Air-Cleaning Device to Reveal Recent Advances of Science.

A research engineer, taming a lot of electrons, neutrons and positrons, held members of the Washington Board of Trade entranced last night in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. He was Dr. Phillips Thomas, of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Using what appeared to be an ordinary flashlight, but which was not, Dr. Thomas trained a beam on a specially-made xylophone, or marimba, and, lo, there arose the strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again."

He made the electrons and their relatives do a lot of other things just as bewildering, all for the purpose of showing Washington's business men what is going on at the frontier of science.

New Health Aid Shown

The demonstration that most fascinated the audience concerned a new invention which some day may have a profound effect on America's general health. This dealt with a new electric air-cleaning apparatus that represents a great advance over apparatus now in use.

Dr. I. Washington Chubb, director of research for the Westinghouse Co., who preceded Dr. Thomas on the platform, explained that in this new machine electricity is made to do what ordinary filters fail to do—really cleanse the air of dust particles.

Using a miniature machine, Dr. Thomas illustrated this by blowing cigarette smoke through a filter, first with the electricity off and then with it on. With the current off the smoke flowed through and poured out of a sort of chimney.

With the electricity turned on, the smoke was trapped and then seemingly shattered into nothingness.

Dr. Thomas explained the electricity had captured the solid particles in the smoke and deposited them on an electric field.

Already, he said, this air-cleansing machine has proved its value in helping sufferers from allergic diseases like asthma and hay fever. Also, he said, it has been known to keep lace curtains clean even in Pittsburgh.

Philosophizing over the advances made in the electrical field, Dr. Chubb, himself a noted inventor, told the Board of Trade:

"We begin to realize that we know very little of the hidden secrets of nature.

Sees Astonishing Gains.

"Discoveries, inventions and new developments are increasing at an astonishing rate. The great progress comes through research by scientists, in the universities, various scientific foundations, and by the team work of trained experts in the industrial laboratories.

"It is often urged that science should be curbed to allow industrial application to catch up. You can't stop people thinking and striving to better their condition in life, and working for a favorable position in industry. * * *

"Nobody knows how applications will be made and what will come out of this great scientific revolution. However, history is reasonably sure to repeat and the new knowledge will bring about changes and improvements in life and industry far beyond the wildest imagination."

Girls' Training School Housing Wrangle Ended

D. C. Heads Approve Plan to Build Dormitory With 24 Rooms.

A controversy over the type of dormitory cottages to be constructed at the National Training School for Girls was ended yesterday as the District Commissioners approved a compromise recommendation of the Board of Public Welfare.

Adopting in part a proposal of the Budget Bureau, the welfare board plans to erect one 24-room cottage, instead of two 12-room cottages as originally recommended, but so built as to be occupied as two separate units.

The 12-room cottage plan was attacked as uneconomical and inefficient by the Budget Bureau. Although the welfare board had previously upheld the superintendent of the school, in demanding 12-room cottages so that the more hardened inmates might be segregated, it later decided to accept the bureau's suggestion.

Elwood Street, Director of Public Welfare, pointed out that the total construction cost of the larger cottage will be $71,225, leaving $16,275 for starting an assembly room-gymnasium over the heating plant at the school.

Suspect Held In $3,000 Theft At WPA Office

Charged with the theft of $3,000 worth of adding machines from the offices in which he worked, Herman Davis, 35, of the 700 block of Thirteenth street northwest, a statistician for the District WPA, was arrested last night.

Police said Davis, a former Leavenworth convict, who was employed by the organization at Nineteenth and D streets northwest, had stolen all the machines—which varied in value from $75 to $600 apiece—during a period of three months.

He then took them to second-hand dealers, police asserted, and represented himself as a salesman. They have recovered 11 of the machines.

After his arrest by WPA investigators Tom Cullen and Lewis Lipsitz and Detective Sergts. Joe Schiman and Harry Britton, Davis was locked in Third Precinct jail.

Gas Company Asks Merger Of 3 Firms

P.U.C. Permit Sought to Acquire Georgetown, Montgomery Lines.

Employes' Jobs Safe, Savings Seen in Proposed Deal.

Six months after it obtained Congressional authorization, the Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday filed a petition with the Public Utilities Commission for authority to absorb the Georgetown Gas Light Co. and the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light companies of Montgomery County, Md.

Part of the delay, it was said, was due to the necessity of obtaining an opinion from the Bureau of Internal Revenue as to whether the deal is subject to a profits tax. The bureau informed the commission that it is not.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said the commission probably will act upon the application next week. He said he knew of no reason why the transfer should not be approved.

4 Steps Proposed.

Four steps are proposed in the petition. They are:

That the Georgetown Gas Light Co. be liquidated and merged with the Washington Gas Light Co.

That the Washington company acquire the 400 shares of capital stock of the Georgetown company of Montgomery County with a par value of $25. All shares are owned by Georgetown.

That the Washington company acquire 500 shares of capital stock and $128,000 principal of general mortgage bonds of the Washington company of Montgomery County.

That the Washington company execute and deliver a supplemental indenture to American Security and Trust Co., trustee, under its first mortgage dated November 1, 1910, and a supplemental indenture to the Marine Midland Trust Co., of New York, as successor trustee under the mortgage and deed of trust of the Washington company to the Chase National Bank, of New York, dated January 1, 1933.

Savings Seen.

The consolidation of the two major companies and the subsidiary concerns of Montgomery County is expected to effect some economies in administration, but officials of the Washington company say it will result in no dismissals of personnel.

The transaction already has the approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Maryland Public Service Commission.

All of the 6,000 shares of capital stock of $25 par value issued by Georgetown are owned by the Washington company. In addition, the Washington firm owns $196,000 principal amount of general mortgage bonds, Series A, due in 1956.

Secured by Mortgages.

First mortgage 50-year gold coupon bonds due in 1961 of Georgetown, in the amount of $1,000,000, are held by the public and secured by the lien of the mortgage of Georgetown to the American Security & Trust Co., dated August 1, 1911.

All Georgetown stock held by Washington will be burned after the merger, and the mortgage bonds held by the public will be taken over as a debt by the Washington company.

The Washington company also owns 499 of the 500 shares of the Washington company of Montgomery County and, according to its application, is endeavoring to obtain the additional share.

Furniture Factory Swept by Flames

Fire last night swept the work rooms of the A. E. Wurdeman Co., furniture makers and upholsterers, 1201 Connecticut avenue northwest Firemen fought the blaze for a half hour before it was brought under control.

Starting on the third floor, the flames ate through the roof, but firemen prevented them from spreading to the sections of the building where fine furniture and antiques were stored. Dense smoke from upholstering materials handicapped firemen.

More than a thousand persons watched firemen battle the blaze and special police details were called out to direct traffic. Officials of the store said they could not estimate their loss until they were able to determine the fire and water damage.

Boys of '98 Recall Tears, Joy Of War Days in 38th Reunion

Col. England, Captain in Spanish Conflict, Comes From Schenectady as 60 Survivors of D. C. Regiment Gather Here Again.

"Oh, it's Tommy this and Tommy that "And Tommy go away.
"But it's yes, sir, Mr. Atkins,
"When the bands begin to play."—Kipling.

The lights went out at 9 o'clock last night in the ballroom of the Harrington Hotel and in the darkness 60 aging men stood up and sang "Nearer My God to Thee."

They were the heroes of '98, the last of the valiant, handsome bearded band of warriors that Washington hysterically vowed it would never forget when they turned in their arms at the Old Center Market Armory on November 20, 1898—just 38 years ago last night.

It was in May, 1898, that the First Regiment of District of Columbia Volunteers shouldered arms in the old market building—the fine new Archives Building stands there now—and marched proudly up Pennsylvania avenue.

President McKinley cheered the warriors on and the girls all stood on the sidewalks and tearfully shouted "Libra Cuba," and "Remember the Maine," as the First Regiment marched away to war on that May day when the spring breezes fluffed the finest mustaches in Washington.

Nine hundred and twenty fever-ridden warriors came back to Washington in November of the same year and the girls cheered and the bands played and there were promises of immortality on every side.

Vowed Annual Reunion

And the soldiers at 9 o'clock in the Old Center Market Armory held aloft their guns for the last time as a regiment and vowed, with the enthusiasm of youth, that they would meet again each November 20 until death took the last man.

"We figure there are 300 of us still alive, but we're scattered all over the world," explained "Private" William A. Hickey, of Company C, historian of the outfit, last night. Gone was his flowing mustache and his gray hair was close clipped. Private Hickey is "around 70."

Capt. George England was there in the bemedaled uniform of a retired colonel of the United States Army.

"I've been trying to get back with you fellows for 38 years," he apologized. "But I was either in the Philippines, or China, or France, or else there was some general coming to inspect us just as I'd arranged my leave. They decided I was too young for the Army last year and I won't miss any more of these meetings."

Col. England had shaved his mustache, too.

"Well, I'll be darned," the colonel interrupted. "Thirty-eight years ago I'd call the company to attention and a dawgone private in the front ranks would stand there grinning at me. And now there he is still grinning at me. How'ya, George. Meet me after the speech making is over.

Col. England came down from Schenectady, N. Y., to attend the reunion. "I told Dolly there wasn't any general to keep me away," he explained.

There wasn't any rank, military or civilian, at the reunion.

"Capt." John Lewis Smith, prominent attorney, was "John Lewis" to the "boys" he commanded, and Robert Campbell, of Lyons, N. J., brought laughter as he circulated among the tables with a copy of The Washington Post dated September 9, 1898, carrying a full page picture of officers of the regiment.

"I wouldn't take $5,000 for this paper," Campbell said.

Monument Indorsed.

A resolution introduced by Smith advocating erection of a monument to the memory of deceased members of the regiment was adopted.

"Capt." Sheridan Ferree received unanimous support for a resolution advocating erection of a National Guard Armory here. One of the "youngsters" at the reunion recalled that Capt. Ferree was his captain in the Washington Cadet Corps when it consisted of two companies.

The average age of the men at the reunion last night was 63, but their voices rang out full and strong.

"We'd turn out the lights and sing at 9 o'clock if the President was speaking," one of the veterans explained. "We sing in memory of our departed comrades. We don't forget."

Tuberculin Tests Urged For School Athletes

All members of the football and basketball squads of District high schools, as well as track men, are to be included in the offer of free tuberculin and X-ray examinations by the Health Department, financed by the Tuberculosis Association, it was announced yesterday.

Action authorizing use of funds for this purpose was taken yesterday by the board of directors of the association at the request of two physical education directors, Birch E. Bayh and Dr. E. B. Henderson.

Capital Woman Injured In Georgia Accident

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Sterling Mead, of 1149 Sixteenth street, Washington, was injured in an automobile accident near here today. She was brought to a Savannah hospital where attendants said extent of her injuries was not immediately determined.

Her husband, Dr. S. V. Mead, accompanied her to the hospital, but was not listed as a patient. Their automobile was said to have left the highway, rolling over several times.

D.C. Economy Study Urged By Tax Group

Lusk Advocates Survey on Eve of Hearing on Fiscal Relations.

The Washington Taxpayers Association yesterday drew a red herring across the fiscal relations inquiry by urging the President's special committee to make a thorough study of District governmental costs along with the responsibility of the United States to the municipal administration of the National Capital.

Rufus S. Lusk, president of the association, addressed a letter to George McAneny, chairman of the fiscal relations committee, on the eve of a scheduled conference between the committee, the three District Commissioners and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan.

His proposal is directly contrary to the wishes of the District heads, who feel that Congress, in adopting the rider to the 1937 District appropriations act, intended that the committee should confine its task to devising a formula for Federal contributions to the District.

Overlapping Cited.

Lusk said the economy study would be helpful to the committee, to the Commissioners, and to the taxpayers of Washington. The Commissioners do not have the facilities or the money to make such an inquiry, he added, no more than the Washington Taxpayers Association, "which is the only organization that concerns itself exclusively with District governmental costs."

The investigation will be welcomed by the local taxpayers, Lusk said.

"The District government has grown over a period of several generations by one piece being added to another," he continued. "There is a lack of co-ordination and departmentalization. No end of different agencies have a hand in running the town.

Control Is Lacking.

"The Commissioners have practically no control over many important departments of the District government, particularly some of the largest spenders.

"As a practical matter the cost of operating the District government is bound up in the benefits which local taxpayers may receive from any Federal contribution. If the Federal payment is on a percentage basis, say 25 per cent, for example, as our expenses rise we pay three-fourths of any additional expenses and the Federal Government one-fourth.

"If we receive a lump sum, any increase in expenditures falls entirely upon the local taxpayer. To have the Federal contribution increased by $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 at the same time means that the local taxpayer is just $5,000,000 worse off than he was before."

The Commissioners will go before the committee prepared to support the departmental estimates of the costs of services and benefits to the Federal Government as a basis for a United States payment. The estimate is approximately $12,000,000.

O'Hara replied . . . "That was the national anthem," the officer growled . . . "Yeah?" O'Hara returned. "It was never authorized by Congress."

JACK DEMPSEY: At the Schenley party last night your restaurant orchestra walked out because they couldn't wait for the singer to conclude, and had to rush back. The singer who kept them waiting was Estelle Taylor, your ex-wife . . . Fred Astaire: Paul Draper, who was signed to dance at the Paramount this week, quit last night after two shows, explaining that there wasn't enough space on the stage for him to dance. He was replaced by the Wiles—three dancers!

ERROL FLYNN: Mr. and Mrs. Chester Morris celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary this week. To their friends they announced it as their golden wedding anniversary. In Hollywood it really is . . .

WILFRED FUNK: After the election Paramount Newsreel took pictures of Leon & Eddie's paying off election bets. The clips showed Leon eating the covers of the Literary Digest, and Eddie remarking, "I hope you don't get literary indigestion." The clips weren't used, because it was too late. They were sent to the White House, where they were enjoyed so much that Roosevelt requested permission to keep them longer to show at three more functions there!

MARY LEWIS: At your farewell performance at the Versailles last night Bill Gaxton told Bob Hague, your husband: "Say, this place has been crowded every night during Mary's engagement" . . . Your husband answered: "Why not? The food here is marvelous!" . . . Mussolini: Arthur Boran will impersonate President Roosevelt on Cantor's next broadcast. ## In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Idle Chatter.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.

Joan Crawford goes to bed on milk diet for three days after each picture (better than a three weeks' vacation, she claims). No one does a more realistic kissing job (to watch from set-side) than James Stewart. Peas from the same pod: Jane Arthur and Mary Brian (when Mary wears her smart new hairdress). Carl Laemmle, retired movie mogul, wears a fresh carnation daily in memory of his wife, who died in 1919. Contrast in sisters: Demure Dolores and hoydenish Helene Costello.

JOAN CRAWFORD.

Odd to visit Hal Roach studio to see Spanky MacFarland, when once I went there to feast eyes on gorgeous Olive Borden. In need of good pictures to bolster fading prestige: Joe E. Brown and Jean Parker.

Spencer Tracy habitually wears a lonesome, million-miles-away stare and walks alone. Isabel Jewell addresses all masculine telephone callers "Angel," thereby never mischancing to address "Bill" as "Tom." Candidate for prettiest legs: Gloria Stuart (artists for whom she modeled years ago still rave). Sounds like scandal to say that Gail Sheridan's bedroom was furnished by Cecil B. DeMille, but no; she lives at the Girls' Studio Club, where all rooms were furnished by movie notables. Few smiles are as captivating as Sylvia Sidney's.

I barged in on Bing Crosby for dinner the other night and the crooner's eldest, Gary Evan, popped into the living room to say hello. "You're gonna have green peas," he confided, "and I helped cook unbutton them."

When it comes to blighted romances, the movie heart-breakers are no different than the young lad next door to your house who is smitten with the lass he met at church social. This paragraph is inspired by the fact that Hoot Gibson is moaning like the North Wind over loss of his ex-sweetheart, June Gale, who is tossing goo-goo eyes elsewhere. And Lyle Talbot was so broken up when his last girl friend walked out on him that he had to take a long motor trip to Canada to forget. I remember, too, the glum expression that shadowed Robert Taylor's face when Irene Hervey switched her attentions of Allan Jones. The glumness disappeared with the arrival of Barbara Stanwyck, of course. And I am one of many who still believe Director Mauritz Stiller died of a broken heart because Greta Garbo refused to marry him.

"THREE MEN ON A HORSE." First National picturization of the stage comedy by Holm and Abbott, and produced by Alex Yokel, featuring Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell, Sam Levine, Teddy Hart, Paul Harvey, Carol Hughes, Allan Jenkins, Guy Kibbee, Edgar Kennedy and Eddie Anderson. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

BELL.

The early scenes of the picture adhere with remarkable fidelity to the contours and dimensions of the settings employed on the boards. The Trowbridge's leaky little cottage in Ozone Manor is identical with the home on the stage and the bar where henpecked Erwin, the browbeaten victim of an overbearing brother-in-law, seeks solace from his woes, is the same in arrangement as those who have enjoyed this frolic on the stage will remember.

Scenes Enhanced.

There have, of course, been certain diffusions of scene that are inevitable when a stage play is translated to the celluloid, the superior scope of the camera being what it is, but, in the main, "Three Men on a Horse," remains in shadow form precisely what it was in the original—a rowdy, audacious and immensely amusing study in meekness, inebriety and doping the races. It moves to a fast and furious climax and deviates from the effectiveness of the play only to the degree of difference that exists in the personalities of the two casts.

Frank McHugh, although he seemed to me a bit too self-assertive in the early sequences, turns in a completed performance that is incomparably fine, as such bizarre things go. Frank Levine, chief of the barroom dopesters, who are down to their last $12 when blessed little Erwin trudges into the place, is recruited from the original cast, and Teddy Hart presents a vivid study of the gang's stooge, Frankie.

Blondell is the Mabel.

The principal feminine role of Mabel is played by Joan Blondell with a little too much overstressing of the "show-girl" line of patter and effectation, but she, too, winds up on the right side of an excellent performance. Allen Jenkins, as goes without saying, is perfect in this sort of thing and Paul Harvey and Carol Hughes make brother-in-law Clarence and wifey Audrey sufficiently effective for all of the reasonable purposes of the script. Guy Kibbee, is the postcard publisher, Mr. Carver, and Edgar Kennedy is perfect in the role of Harry, the bartender.

The story, naturally, is far-fetched and "screwy"—as all farcical yarns are or they would not be farcical—but there is a sufficiently sound basis of human nature and normal impulses underlying the whole merry business to give it more than ordinary dramatic substance for this sort of diversion.

Augmented Stage Bill.

The stage bill at the Earle this week has been augmented to five acts instead of four. Neila Goodelle, borrowed from the N. B. C. airwaves, is the headliner in fact as well as theory. Although her voice is a trifle strident in the middle register, her high and low notes are of exquisite beauty and her songs, sung both at the 'mike" and at the piano, to her own accompaniment, scored a tremendous hit.

Next in point of audience approval at the reviewed performance came the Maginis, two young Greek gods, who execute feats of physical strength and hand-balancing that betray a complete comprehension of all the laws of equilibrium and leverage.

Lou Duthers, with Jean and Joan, open the bill with a dance revue that has many unique characteristics and an amazing change of tempo and pace, and Cookie Bowers scores his usual unequivocal hit with his inimitable character studies and "cartoon comedy" imitations. Cappy Barra and his Harmonica Ensemble close the stage portion of the program with an extraordinary display of musicianship.

A Popeye cartoon comedy, one of the cleverest released in many months, and the Paramount News, plus an advance flash at the twelve "Gold Diggers of 1937," who are to be guests in town on Tuesday, supplement a feature which comes thundering down the stretch to a Garrison finish on the fastest track you ever have seen!

Plays Original Stage Role in Film

Those Quints Again Steal Show From an Adult Cast of Veterans

"REUNION." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Bruce Gould, with screen play by Sam Hillman, Gladys Lehman and Sonya Levin; featuring Jean Hersholt, Rochelle Hudson, and the Dionne Quintuplets, supported by Helen Vinson, "Slim" Summerville, Robert Kent, Dorothy Peterson, John Qualen, Alan Dinehart, J. Edward Bromberg, Sara Haden and Tom Moore. Directed by Norman Taurog. Scenes of the Quintuplets photographed under the technical direction of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe. Revived Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

It is a very good thing that Loew's Capitol Theater this week tacitly identifies the main portion of the program, for had it not been for the trailer bearing the information "feature presentation," just before "Reunion," it would have been almost impossible to know.

Regardless of what one might think of the adorable Misses Dionne, "Reunion" possesses few qualifications for serious dramatic consideration. Basically, the picture tells of a reunion of Dr. John Luke's 3,000 babies and how the lovable country doctor brings happiness into several families.

With Jean Hersholt as the doctor, supported by a number of players who appeared in "The Country Doctor," and, of course, the quintuplets, the picture is continually entertaining. John Qualen, as the ignored father of the five, and "Slim" Summerville, as the town constable, furnish the comedy for the more serious troubles obtaining between Tom Moore and Helen Vinson, Robert Kent and Rochelle Hudson, and others.

"Slim" Becomes Father.

Since this ought to have a birth scene, that desideratum has been met, with Mr. Summerville the proud papa who expected six and only got one.

What seemed, however, to be the more important aspect of the bill—because it was the first seen, perhaps—was the stage show which opened with WOL's Art Brown at the console and Johnny Perkins parading up and down the left aisle with a portable microphone. Several unusual voices were caught and two patrons (stooges?) were called upon for further selections. Jack Roberts offered the yodel, "Sleep, Baby Sleep," followed by "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling."

Blending the organ program into the stage show proper, "Is It True What They Say About Dixie?" turned into a smooth colonial routine by the Elida Ballet, who demonstrated that they could sing almost as well as they can dance.

Acts introduced by Mr. Perkins were DeRoze, who with "plain" water managed to serve any beverage requested; Glen Carow, the youthful Washington pianist, who became famous through his pre-Kreisler concert recently, played Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" followed by the "Marche Polonaise" (Chopin) with the Elida girls doing a classico-moderne routine in accompaniment, and Madelyn Killeen, who, billed as a comedienne, did much better as a chanteuse, offering "The Way You Look Tonight."

Fine as was the bill to this point, it was eclipsed totally by "Withers' Opry," as grand a rough-and-tumble burlesque of a variety program at the turn of the century as you would care to see. Replete with an old "moom pitcher," a Chinese magician, and a scene from "Romeo and Juliet," the act, which oldsters will pleasantly remember, was a riot. Charles Withers and his entire company—not forgetting the Joe Cookian array of inanimate impediments—put on a show in rare fashion, convulsing the audience with gags and gadgets of which no adequate description can be made with words.

Film Table

Palace—"Come And Get It," at 12 noon, 2:20, 4:45, 7:10 and 9:30 p. m.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Eli Culbertson says.

Entry Destruction.

Even when a player has a lot of winning cards in his hand, he is helpless unless he also holds a card (called an entry) which will enable him to lead. A great part of technique in the play of the cards consists in preserving the entries held by your side and destroying those held by the opponents. A simple entry-destroying play enabled South to make his contract in the hand below:

South, dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ 8 4♡ 10 7 4◇ A 10 7 3 2♣ A 9 5 | |
| ♠ J 10 9 7 3♡ A 8 5◇ 9 6♣ J 8 4 | West / North / East / South | ♠ K 5 2♡ 9 3 2◇ K 8 4♣ Q 10 7 2 |
| | ♠ A Q 6♡ K Q J 6◇ Q J 5♣ K 6 3 | |

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 N T | Pass | 3 N T | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

North's raise to three notrump is an illustration of the standard responses to the opening bid of one no trump in the Culbertson System. With a long suit and two honor-tricks, North can be quite sure that his hand will be of great value to his partner. Since his partner is sure to hold about four honor-tricks, the combined hands will total about six and the presence of a long suit makes game reasonably sure.

West opened the Jack of spades. East covered with the King, and South won with the Ace. Declarer could count two spade tricks, at least four diamonds, and two clubs. It was apparent that sooner or later he would have to establish a heart trick. If the diamond finesse should lose, South's remaining spade stopper would be knocked out, and if West were then in a position to win a trick with his Ace of hearts, he would run the spades.

South decided to destroy the Ace of hearts as an entry by the simple expedient of knocking it out before the spades were established. Accordingly, he led the King of hearts at the second trick. West won and continued the spades. South ducked and took the next round of spades. When East finally won with the King of diamonds, he had no spade to lead to his partner, and since the Ace of hearts had already been knocked out, he could not give West the lead in any other way. Declarer thus made ten tricks.

Had South taken the diamond finesse before knocking out the Ace of hearts, he would have been set one trick by the line of play suggested above.

Bride-to-Be By Vida Hurst

SYNOPSIS.

Becky Stern for several months has been carrying on her secretarial duties in the home of her employer, Francis Rhodes, who has been ill. Now that Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes have gone on a cruise, she has remained to act as secretary to Philip Rhodes, her regular employer's nephew, who has recently returned to San Francisco after eight years in Mexico City. Philip has agreed to postpone opening his own architect's office until his uncle's return, so he may keep an eye on his masked young cousin, Francis Junior, whose refusal to learn the business and tendency to drink has worried his father.

Philip is 30, Becky 22. He is cynical, disillusioned. He tells her that he intends never to fall in love with another woman—that all his experience has taught him to avoid entangling himself with them. Nevertheless Becky loves him. She is happy merely to be with him, to listen to his dreams to great buildings he has designed and will design. On the day when he receives a contract for a big San Francisco theater, he kisses her and asks her to celebrate by having dinner with him.

CHAPTER 12.

The first dinner together proved to be the prelude to the most exciting summer of Becky's life. Philip showed her a San Francisco she had not known existed. They dined at countless foreign restaurants in various foreign quarters of the city. Spent one night wandering through Chinatown and the next on Telegraph Hill, seated at a table overlooking the bay.

They visited the zoo and walked miles along the strand, returning to devour hot dogs and coffee. They dined to Italian music and danced to that provided by a real Tahitian orchestra. They watched the sun set on the ocean and drove to the top of Twin Peaks to gaze with fascinated eyes at the glittering lights.

They shared a thousand delights and were thrilled to discover that the same things gave them joy. It was like moving through the golden mazes of a dream. Or living in a fairy tale. It had all the unreality of magic and at times Becky felt as if she ought to pinch herself to see if it were true.

Once she said to him, "But what about Francis, jr.? You told Mrs. Little you didn't like to leave him alone."

Doesn't Tell.

"Regina informed him that I was staying at home on his account, so he insists that from now on he will eat his dinners downtown," Philip answered. "I'm sorry, for we were getting along so well, but selfishly, of course, I'm glad. It gives me more time to spend with you. Besides, Francis doesn't really seem to need supervision. Whatever else he may be doing he gets to bed at a reasonable hour and goes to the factory on time."

Becky had not told him of the telephone conversations Francis continued to hold with her. She felt uncomfortably conscious of the fact that the boy insisted his good behavior was solely to make an impression on her.

Evidently he did not know that she was spending most of her leisure time with Philip. Her parents knew it, however, and did not approve of it, but had decided not to say too much against it. With their lifelong custom of conferring secretly and adopting a common course of action, they agreed to do what they could to encourage her to go out with other young men.

One night, Becky's father invited one of the younger executives from his former office to come to dinner. Becky was told about it long enough ahead so that she was compelled to be there, but it was far from a successful evening. The young man was good-looking and intelligent, but Becky listened to him with a look on her face which her parents recognized as that of resignation.

"Ill go through with this because I love you," it said. "But it won't make the least difference in the way I feel."

No Interest.

Foster MacMillan, fresh-faced and serious, fastened his bright, blue eyes on Becky and spoke at length and well on various topics without rousing the slightest interest.

"I've some books I'd like to have you read," he said when he was leaving. "If you don't mind I'll bring them over some night next week."

Her lips assented but her eyes were full of evasion. As soon as he was gone she hurried to her room.

"I have to get up early tomorrow," she explained. "Philip is calling for me. There's a theater being built which he wants me to see. It's on the order of one he designed in Mexico City."

When the door of her room had closed behind her Josephine Stern sighed.

"I'm afraid we're too late."

"Maybe not," her husband said more cheerfully. "It will take time but Foster MacMillan is a fine young chap full of modern ideas which would appeal to a girl like Becky, if she would just listen."

"If I thought this man from Mexico wanted to marry her, it might be different," Mrs. Stern admitted. "You don't suppose such a thing is in his mind?"

"No, I don't. Men like that don't as a rule marry their secretaries. What she needs is some nice boy of her own age. If only we could have sent her to college. She's too intelligent for the only kind she has a chance to meet."

The next afternoon Philip said, "Do you realize that the summer is practically over? In two more weeks Uncle Francis and Aunt Molly will be coming home?"

Becky gazed at him thoughtfully, wondering what difference this would make in the situation. It would end their business association. Much as Philip might want her to continue, she knew he would not ask her to leave his uncle. And what would it mean to their relationship otherwise? Philip was so comfortable with her now. He talked to her as if they had known each other for years.

"We've had fun, haven't we, Becky?" he asked, glancing at her with those strangely compelling eyes.

Something to Ask.

He leaned toward her and for a moment she felt dizzily that he was about to take her in his arms, then he said quietly, "I've something to ask you but not here. Shall we have dinner together tomorrow night?"

His manner implied that what he had to ask her was important but she dared not believe what was written in every tone of his voice. Once he had made up his mind he would not change. She told herself she could wait indefinitely for him to tell her. It was so wonderfully exciting to sit at her desk, taking his dictation, loving him with every breath she drew but pretending to be nothing but an efficient secretary.

"He loves me," she thought. "He has admitted it in everything but words."

She felt as if that night would definitely end a certain period of her life. Tomorrow Philip would speak, and when he did there would be no doubt as to her answer.

"Darling Philip! I've loved you since the day you stood at the door looking at me with those stormy eyes, I was so sorry for you. Not because of your wrist, but because you looked so baffled and angry."

That night Becky sat in the living room, pretending to listen to the radio. Jinny and Jimmy were in bed and her parents were playing bridge with some friends. It was almost midnight, but she was not sleepy. In less than 30 minutes it would begin to be the most important day in her whole life.

The doorbell interrupted her dreaming and peering cautiously out before she answered, Becky saw Francis, jr. He looked white and ill and, without waiting to consider the consequences, she opened the door.

"Becky!" he cried, lurching into the room. "You are here? I was afraid you might be out."

Drunk.

Reeking with whisky and reeling so that he could scarcely stand, he put his arms about her.

"Pretty clever of me to remember where you lived, wasn't it? Had to get rid of the Vinton brat first. Look, Becky, is it true what she said? Have you been going places with Philip?"

She dared not push him away for fear he would fall.

"Let's not discuss that now, Francis. How did you get here?"

"How do you suppose? My car's outside, but I sure had a devil of a time finding a place to park."

Urging him gently into a chair she glanced out the window to see his car halfway across the sidewalk.

She said sharply, "You can't park there. And you can't stay here. Mother and father will be home any minute."

"All right," he said. "Let's take a ride."

Becky went for a coat.

"I'll go with you if you'll let me drive," she suggested.

The boy chuckled. "Why not?"

He was almost unconscious as she assisted him down the steps. Once in the car he relaxed into the seat, paying no attention as she shifted gears and backed the car into the street.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club begins its fifty-first season by presenting in Barker Hall the Washington String Quartet: Milton Schwartz, Paul Brightenberg, George Wargo and Howard Mitchell. Program: Poco Adagio-Cantabile from "Kaiser" Quartet (Haydn), Quartet No. 4 (Quincy Porter), Quartet, Op. 15 (Erno von Dohnanyi).

For the fourth consecutive year the Friday Morning Music Club tendered to the Washington String uartet the place of honor on the opening program of the season, a distinction which that group of young musicians has justified by its consistent progress in artistry and its maintenance of musical standards. Stemming from the National Symphony Orchestra, of which they are members, the four players have gained through the period of association a praiseworthy flexibility in performance and a notable consentience in interpretation.

Their playing of the slow movement from Haydn's "Kaiser" quartet was a tribute in memoriam to the late Josef Kaspar, who had been their mentor and kindly counselor. Moreover, it voiced the sentiments of the Friday Morning Club members who had long known and appreciated his sterling qualities as man and musician. A more appropriate selection could probably not have been made, for the music expressed not the gloom of an irremediable sorrow, but the tenderness of regret that accompanies memories of shared friendship.

Quincy Porter's fourth string quartet is one of the most amiable examples of his chamber music. Not only does it show his growing skill in the quartet medium but it also reveals the incisive character of his htought and the clarity with which he expresses himself. While it is intellectualized music, it has none of that frigidity which one associates with cerebral art, but is suffused with a genial warmth.

In the quartet by Erno von Dohnanyi one hears an agreeable merger of racial elements with a personal idiom. While the music is flavored with themes of a distinctly Hungarian savor, there is no slavish following of folk modes, but a free adaptation for poetic purposes.

11,000 to See Hoyas' Strong Line Oppose Terrapins' Aces.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Fired to a new pitch of determination by the searing memory of two previous humiliations on the field of honor, a big, rugged and confident Georgetown eleven goes marching into College Park this afternoon for the third annual renewal of its "modern" football rivalry with the University of Maryland.

They will be met by a burly brigade of Old Liners just as determined to add another link to their lengthening chain of victories in this, the Washington area's lone football classic. Maryland is as confident as its ancient rival and apparently just as rugged, boasting, as it does, a virtual "iron man" complement.

Georgetown goes into the conflict with the better record, five victories and a 7-7 tie with New York University in seven games. The Hoyas were humbled for the first time this season by a big and clever Manhattan eleven last week.

Maryland, smarting from the sting of a surprising 13-7 defeat, inflicted by an inspired Virginia Military Institute team last week, has lost three of its eight games.

Promised ideal football weather by an impartial weatherman, and a brisk battle, a sell-out attendance of approximately 11,000 fans was expected to see the game. On a basis of past performances Georgetown rules a 6-5 favorite with little Maryland money available. Psychologically, however, the Hoyas are the underdogs, having entered the last two contests in the undesirable role of favorites.

The game promises to develop into a gruelling struggle between a good Maryland backfield and a good Georgetown line—the best ever developed in Coach Jack Hagerty's tenure at the Hilltop. Breaks are expected to have a decided influence on the final outcome, but both teams expect to make their own, rather than wait for an enemy miscue.

Maryland will rely on the speed and all-around abilities of its two outstanding backs, Bill Guckeyson, a worthy candidate for all-America honors, and "Jumbo Jim" Meade, line-smashing sophomore, who has attained stardom in his first year on the varsity.

But Maryland has more than this pair to throw at the Hoyas' stubborn defense and probably will call on them before the expiration of time. Coleman Headley, a smart-running halfback, and Charley Ellinger, quarterback, top the list of eligibles.

While Georgetown supporters are placing the bulk of their hopes and confidence in the line, the backfield must carry a large portion of the burden. Tommy Keating, a youthful field general with an old football head, will direct the Hilltoppers' attack, aided by Bill Duff, tough and hard-hitting fullback, who is at his best when the chips are down; Bill Valliquette, blocking back, and Bob Nolan, another good blocker and capable pass receiver.

This group does not rate on par with Old Line ball carriers who are faster, shiftier and apparently better all-around gridmen. But Hagerty is pinning his hopes of victory on an eleven-man performance, not individual brilliance. He doesn't expect any of his men to get away on long runs, possibly for touchdowns, as Maryland fans expect of Guckeyson, but he does expect it to penetrate the Terrapins' defense by steady pounding through the line.

Maryland's line, incidentally the most overlooked group of players in this vicinity, will have a big voice in Georgetown's actions on the field. From lanky Vic Willis at left end through the middle to Blair Smith at the right wing, the Terps have a capable first line of defense, one that will surprise the Hoyas' by its stubbornness and ability.

Both elevens are armed to the teeth with black magic for use this afternoon, and a wide open game is expected. Maryland is conceded an edge in punting and passing, but the District eleven has prepared what it believes to be an air-tight defense for the passes, and has a couple of fleet safety men who may turn an enemy punt into a touchdown.

Wood Defeats Manero In P. G. A. Golf Play

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 20.—Four veteran campaigners—Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee, Pa.; Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J.; Denny Shute, of Chicago, and "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, of Louisville—are the semifinalists in the National P. G. A. golf championship.

They survived today's quarter-final battles, where Tony Manero, the swarthy, smiling little National open champion; Harold McSpaden, the steady plugging Boston professional by way of Kansas City; Horton Smith, the putting wizard, and Jimmy Hines, pride of Garden City, N. Y., failed, great as were their efforts.

Thomson, who came over to this country from Scotland on the same boat with Bobby Cruickshank about 16 years ago, led McSpaden to the guillotine on the eighteenth green this Indian summer afternoon, winning by the scant margin of 1 up after the husky Boston star had been 5 down and 7 to go.

Shute Impressive.

McSpaden's daring but futile comeback, which might easily have sent the young man to the thirty-seventh hole, had his putt from 12 feet for a birdie on the last hole dropped, instead of teetering on the brink of the cup. This was just one of many thrills served up to the gallery.

Shute's impressive victory over Smith by 3 and 2 was another highlight, even though the former British open champion led the Joplin Ghost by the unexpectedly large margin of 6 up at the end of 18 holes.

In short, Smith played 34 holes in two under par, the last 16 in 5 under—yet he couldn't win, because Shute was matching him birdie for birdie, par for par, and won with a 4 under par exhibition.

Manero, backed into favoritism by Sarazen and a host of vanquished professionals, was eliminated by the handsome Wood, 5 and 4—largest margin of the day.

Semifinals Today.

Mehlhorn put the hooks to Mr. Hines, 4 and 2.

Tomorrow the four semi-finalists are down for 36 additional holes, with 2:45 and 1:45 the starting times.

Thomson and Wood, the best looking professionals in the business, are to clash in the upper bracket, while Mehlhorn and Shute will meet in the lower brackets.

The general opinion is that Jimmy Thomson, the former Western High School golfer and one-time assistant to his dad at Burning Tree, will meet Shute in the finals Sunday, and that Thomson has a decided advantage, inasmuch as his terrific wood and iron shots are far superior to anything his rivals can offer.

Thomson got back on his mallet starting with the tenth, won three straight holes with even par golf.

McLarnin Wins Verdict Over Ambers

Lightweight Champ Takes Terrific Beating; Victor Is Due a Ross Bout.

Just when the boxing world was considering the Vancouver Irishman about washed up, after more than a decade of warring, McLarnin stepped out tonight and gave Ambers, the young "Herkimer Hurricane," such a battering that the 10,229 customers wondered what was holding the lightweight champion up.

In McLarnin's third non-title victory over a 135-pound ruler, punch and experience completely routed Ambers' youth and speed. And, after Jimmy's trip-hammer blows to the head had slowed Lou up, the "Hurricane," usually one of the most elusive targets in the ring, became just a blood-spattered punching bag.

Grandest Victory.

In former years Jimmy had beaten Al Sirger and Sammy Mandell when they were champions. But tonight's triumph was grander than those, because the 30-year-old veteran was considered nearing the end of the pugilistic trail, despite his recent victory over the fading Tony Canzoneri.

Tonight's impressive triumph unquestionably will earn for jolting James another chance to regain the welterweight title, although he must wait until Champion Barney Ross, Izzy Jannazzo and Cerefino Garcia have decided who will be the man to meet McLarnin.

The 22-year-old Ambers, who has not been knocked out in more than three years of professional fighting, was on the verge of his first kayo several times tonight, but he displayed amazing ruggedness in not taking a single trip to the floor.

At times Ambers seemed to have stage fright, or to be too tense. He did not have the same lightning speed that he displayed in beating Canzoneri. Perhaps the weight of

Wildcats Are Favored To Beat Irish, Win Title

By the Associated Press.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 20.—Northwestern will lay down its last barrage in the campaign for national gridiron honors tomorrow. The Wildcats, undefeated, untied and currently ranked as the Nation's No. 1 football power, will level their fire against the fighting Irish of Notre Dame before a capacity throng of 56,000. A solid claim to the mythical national title was the prize for a Northwestern triumph.

Season's records give Lynn Waldorf's tightly knit array the edge. Its guns, manned by the "dashing dons"—Heap and Geyer—burly Fred Vanzo, Bernie Jefferson and Steve Toth, have blasted aside seven opponents. Notre Dame has been defeated twice, by Pittsburgh and Navy. Northwestern will have the advantage in weight, and appears to have the edge in reserve power.

Irish at Top Strength.

The Irish, a great crew to reach the heights in the clutches, will fight to avenge the beating that wrecked an undefeated record a year ago. Coach Elmer Layden has a host of manpower, but probably will rely on Andy Puplis, Bob Wilke, Larry Danbom, Vic Wojcihovski, Jack McCarthy and Nevin McCormick, to advance the ball.

Both squads will be at top strength. Leon (Red) Fuller, Northwestern's 6-foot, 5-inch center, who was kept out of the Michigan game last week, has shaken off his injuries. Fullback Steve Miller and Frank Kopczak, first-string tackle, until recently on the Irish hospital roster, have recovered sufficiently to play at least a part of the game.

Fordham 3-to-1 Favorite Today

Clean Record Is Menaced by Georgia Passes.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Georgia's snapping bulldogs of football, keyed to a new spirit after their victories over Florida and Tulane, arrived in the big city today with firm intentions of wrecking Fordham's Rose Bowl hopes.

Rated at no better than a 3-to-1 shot in the wagering, the Bulldogs planned to pass their way to an upset before an estimated throng of 35,000 at the Polo Grounds tomorrow. The team was in its best physical condition of the season.

Champ Draws Commission Ultimatum

He Must Sign for Bout With Schmeling or Face Suspension.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—James J. Braddock, the heavyweight champion, faces probable suspension in New York State if he signs to fight Joe Louis before signing articles to defend his title against Max Schmeling next June.

This was made clear today when representatives of Madison Square Garden, co-promoter of the June fight, sought to ascertain the exact status with the New York Commissioners of the proposed February no-decision contest in Atlantic City.

James J. Johnston, Garden promoter, was told by Chairman John J. Phelan that his body has only two interests in the matter—to see that Braddock first signs articles for a Schmeling fight and to satisfy itself that the champion is again in good physical condition.

Johnston then said if Braddock is physically fit to fight Louis in February the Garden would insist he defend his title then instead of next June.

"If Schmeling is agreeable, we could put the show in the Garden

Cards' Losses Make W.Md. Favorite

Adamaitis, Carroll Both Will Be Out of Terror Contest Today.

Catholic University's football team reaches the end of a long and thorny trail this afternoon in its own back yard, meeting the air-minded Green Terrors of Western Maryland at 2 o'clock.

Handicapped by the absence of Bill Adamaitis, one of the best passers in this vicinity, and "Irish" Carroll, elusive ball carrier, the Cardinads' cause appears to be well-nigh hopeless. The visitors will be at full strength for the fray and bent on avenging a 20-6 lacing received last year.

Burke Vidnovic, sensational sophomore, will be at left halfback for Catholic, teaming with Bud Munhall, hero of last week's victory over North Carolina State. "Spec" Foley, at quarterback, and Bob Makofske, fullback, round out a backfield that packs a punch and is fast of foot. But as matters stand the Cards are going into battle in the role of underdog.

Line Battle Looms.

Western Maryland, coached by Dick Harlow's former pupil, Charley Havens, is fast and rangy, possessed of a sure-fire passing attack and a tough ball club to best any Saturday afternoon you care to mention. In Westerville and Benjamin the Terrors have two rip-snorting ends who might be termed triple-threaters, for they can block, tackle and catch passes with the best of them. Catholic will see a lot of these boys.

It is "Sunshine" Campbell, however, who is the big gun of the attack, for his steel-like arm boomerangs the passes that start the Terrors on their touchdown marches. "Sunshine," incidentally, is a southpaw, both as a passer and punter, and that doesn't help the opposition.

On paper the affair shapes up as

Wisconsin Plots Minnesota Upset

Madison, Wis., Nov. 20 (AP).—With a crowd of 36,000 persons expected, largest of the season here, the underdog Wisconsin football team was keyed tonight for the final game of the campaign against its old rival Minnesota.

Wisconsin will pin its hopes for an upset victory largely on a polished pass attack against the Gophers' strong running game. Wisconsin hasn't won a game in Big Ten competition, while Minnesota has lost only to Northwestern.

The Minnesota squad will arrive here tomorrow noon after spending the night in Milwaukee. The kickoff is scheduled for 2 p. m. (Central standard time).

Yale, and Kelley, Bare Choice Over Harvard

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 20.—Larry Kelley's football finale, memory of past week's thrillers and prospects of a hard-fought battle promised to lure more than 65,000 persons, the season's largest crowd, into the bowl tomorrow for the fifty-fifth gridiron clash between Yale and Harvard, traditional rivals.

Kelley, Yale's most colorful captain in some time, makes his final appearance in a Yale football uniform in this contest. His actions, usually unpredictable and always spectacular, set him off as the most marked man on the field.

The Blue and Crimson have fired the imaginations of alumni and others by their play in recent weeks, Yale by coming from behind last Saturday to whip Princeton, 26 to 23, in a thriller that left the spectators limp from excitement, and Harvard for its tenacious fight against Navy and tie with Princeton.

Yale is favored slightly in this important "Ivy League" clash in which a victory or tie will bring the Blue coveted "Big Three" honors for the season. The kick-off is slated at 1:45 p. m.

Given a "break" in the weather, and the forecast is cloudy and colder, Harold F. Woodcock, Yale A. A. business manager, said tonight possibilities were good for the game to attract a capacity crowd of 72,000.

Both teams engaged in light workouts today in the bowl, confining their activities to signal rehearsals, punting and passing drills.

Marquette U. Risks Record

35,000 to See Unbeaten Foe Face Duquesne.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 20.—Marquette University's Golden Avalanche rolled into the Smoky City today prepared to show the Dauntless Dukes of Duquesne University the magic which spellbound seven Midwestern and Pacific Coast foes.

Their conflict tomorrow was expected to attract a nearly capacity throng of 35,000 into Forbes Field, including several hundred enthusiastic Marquette fans who headed eastward tonight on two special trains.

Master Lad Romps Off With Bowie Handicap to Return $26.60

Shoeless Joe Is Second in Feature

Lady Marnock Pays $57 in Third; Flag of War Is Worth $41.50.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 20.—Jockey Eddie De Camillis was the only man on Master Lad here this afternoon and he had to do little more than guide to win the 'Three Men on a Horse" handicap, feature of the afternoon's program. Every man in the crowd of 8,000 wished he had a ticket on Master Lad, for the son of Star Master paid a $26.60 mutuel.

Coming up on the outside in the stretch run Master Lad defeated Shoeless Joe by a length and a quarter with Teddy Haslam third and a like distance from second money. The trio of long shots chased the heavily played Scatter Brain and Angus out of the money.

A field of ten sought the purse and Furfiber flattered his backers by going into the lead at the break. Shoeless Joe was following closely as the field reached the backstretch with Teddy Haslam third and Master Lad fourth. However, De Camillis had a strong hold on the ultimate winner.

In the stretch Furfiber stopped as if he were short and Shoeless Joe appeared about to go through the formality of winning, but Master Lad had been turned loose now and he buck jumped to the front and was opening a gap at the finish.

The day was marked by ideal racing weather and the feature was run over a fast track in 1:49 3-5.

Ptolemy Wins With Rush.

C. V. Whitney's Ptolemy came from last place to be first by two lengths in the first race, a dash for maidens at 6 furlongs. Jockey M. Peters gave the winner a fine ride, coming to the outside for racing room. Harvesting and Abbots Hour battled for the lead most of the way and the camera gave Harvesting second money. The winner paid a $5 mutuel and ran the route in 1:14 2-5.

The second favorite in a row scored in the second race. A. C. Compton's Apprehend making it two straight winners for Jockey Peters. The Apprehension gelding won by a neck over Masked Gal with Paralda third and three lengths away. Apprehend was prominent throughout the running and withstood a punishing stretch drive to hold the slight margin. He paid a $5.70 mutuel.

To the tune of $57.90 mutuel, Lady Marnock took a nose decision via the camera from Terpsichore in the third race. Sleek had much trouble during the mile and 70 yards test, and could do no better than third. Jockey R. Watson had the mount on the winner and plied a telling whip through the stretch to be up in the final jump. A field of a dozen cheap platers competed.

Sir Randolph Wins Duel.

Sir Randolph, at a $7.10 mutuel, was given a camera verdict over Tellwick in the fourth race with Perfect Devil taking third money. Tellwick took command late in the stretch with Sir Randolph coming from behind. The two hooked up in a head-and-head battle nearing the wire. A field of seven competed over the mile and 70 yards route.

Naval Cadet, a frequent disappointment, finally took a purse in the sixth race to pay a $10 mutuel The veteran American Flag gelding worked his way to the leaders from far back and took the decision in easy fashion. Inferno Lad and Happy Flag were second and third in the mile and a furlong test.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PTOLEMY, $5.00, $2.80, $2.30; HARVESTING, $2.40, $2.10; ABBOT'S HOUR (entry), $3.00.
PTOLEMY, much the best, was away slowly, was steered wide for racing room, hounded to the front when called upon and was drawing out at the end. ABBOT'S HOUR ran along on the inside of HARVESTING throughout and hung on well. HARVESTING had good speed throughout while setting and pressing the pace and closed willingly, but unable to resist the winner. MARFEU held a forward position from the break and showed a good effort. NADIR gained slowly through the running. CHALLENGE CUP had good early speed. SLIPPERY JIM was through after three eighths. The others showed nothing and had no mishaps.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:11. Off at 2:14½. Winner, A. C. Compton's ch. g. (4), by Apprehension—Bantry Pass. Trained by H. O. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:14 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—APPREHEND, $5.70, $3.00, $2.80; MASKED GAL, $4.00, $3.70; PARALDA, $6.10.
APPREHEND, in the thick of contention from the start, rallied when placed to punishment and lasted to stave off MASKED GAL. The latter raced GOLDEN KEY into defeat and held on gamely under punishment. PARALDA came through on the inside to close full of run. SAM WORTHY closed some ground in late stretch. PARAGUAY TEA saved ground entering the stretch and was going well at the end. GOLDEN KEY stopped after setting the pace. CLEAN SPORT was in tight quarters swinging for the stretch. AROUSED stopped after going forwardly for a quarter.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:41½. Off at 2:42½. Winner, Medway Stable's b. m. (7), by George II—Lady Kilmarnock. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:50, 1:16 3-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:57 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY MARNOCK, $57.90, $26.50, $12.80; TERPSICHORE (field), $32.50, $14.60; SLEEK, $3.90.
LADY MARNOCK began improving her position leaving the back stretch, came to the extreme outside for the final drive and under energetic handling, was up in the concluding stride. TERPSICHORE was forwardly placed from the beginning, came mainly under vigorous handling and just missed. SLEEK had a rough trip, being bumped by ELDEE entering the stretch. SPARTAN LADY worked her way to the top in the early stretch and then tired gradually. CHRYSMUTE moved up menacingly in midstretch, but was shut off while going along the rail. CYNWYD could not reach contention. ELDEE quit after going forwardly for three-quarters.

(DAILY DOUBLE PAID $214.30.)

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:11½. Winner, William Zeigler's jr. b. g. (2), by Sir Andrew—Virginia. Trained by M. Brady. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25, 0:49 4-5, 1:16, 1:44 2-5, 1:49 2-5.

| CHILCA | (Smock) | 108½ | 4 | 5 | 4h | 6² | 6½ | 7 | 7 | 15.50 |

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR RANDOLPH, $7.10, $4.00, $4.10; TELLWICK, $9.50, $6.70; PERFECT DEVIL, $5.90.
SIR RANDOLPH, outrun for a half, worked his way to the leaders gradually and under drive barely lasted. TELLWICK moved to the front with good energy midway of the stretch and fought it out willingly. UVALDE dropped far out of it, came through on the rail entering the stretch, but tired suddenly. PERFECT DEVIL was a forward factor throughout. LANDSCAPE had early speed. COMPLIMENT was used up drawing out to a long lead under hustling tactics.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37½. Off at 3:40½. Winner, W. E. Johnson's ch. g. (4), by Star Master—Lament. Trained by C. P. Miles jr. Value to winner, $765; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:15, 1:42 1-5, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MASTER LAND, $26.60, $13.80, $7.90; SHOELESS JOE, $9.60; $5.80; TEDDY HASLAM, $16.20.
MASTER LAD, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, rallied sharply when placed to drive while on the outside, easily took command and was drawing out at the end. SHOELESS JOE was hard ridden while pressing the pace of FUR FIBER and had nothing left for the final test. TEDDY HASLAM went evenly throughout. FURFIBER was used up setting the pace. SANDY BOOT could not better position after leaving the back stretch. ANGUS had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:09½. Off at 4:10½. Winner, Shandon Farms' ch. g. (5), by American Flag—Moonlight. Trained by J. J. Greely. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:51, 1:17, 1:43 2-5, 1:57 1-5.

*Field.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAVAL CADET, $10.00, $4.20, $3.70; INFERNO LAD, $3.50, $2.80; HAPPY FLAG, $3.80.
NAVAL CADET, not hurried during the early running, began improving his position swinging for the stretch, took command with a bold move and drew clear to win easily. INFERNO LAD, closer than usual in the early running, took command briefly between calls and closed gamely, but no match for the winner. HAPPY FLAG, outrun for a half, closed with a belated rush. JIM JOHN worked his way to the front, but was tiring at the end. CROOKED LANE had early speed. POMPOSITY moved up menacingly leaving the backstretch, but faltered. PARITY stopped after setting the pace.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36½. Off at 4:38½. Winner, R. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG OF WAR, $41.50, $17.20, $10.50; LITTLE ARGO, $7.60, $7.40; BLIND BROOK, $3.20.
FLAG OF WAR, allowed to settle in best stride, gained sharply along the backstretch, slipped through on the rail entering the stretch and drew out when placed to punishment. LITTLE ARGO, hard ridden to take command, shook off ASHEN leaving the backstretch, and closed gamely under stout handling. BLIND BROOK moved into contention after a quarter, came to the outside for final drive and closed full of run. PAYRACK came with excellent courage in the closing test. WANDREL hung after closing a gap in the early stretch. ASHEN stopped in the stretch. LIVE ONE quit. CAMP CRAIG had early speed. STRATEGIST II dropped out of it early.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 20.

Dear Al: I'm pleased to report that I saw the three-card Monte boys getting the bum's rush yesterday. Don't think that I'm on an antigambling crusade. However, there is not a gambler connected with the three-card game. Let me repeat that it was Gold Clip and not Rough Time that bled in a workout here the other morning. I'm glad the Christmas juvenile is sound because I believe he will go places in the big stakes next year. I have been very patient with the camera used here, but I'm beginning to weaken. The chart callers are wrong occasionally but they are now disagreeing with the pictures with regularity. If memory serves the outside horse has been getting the best of it, or at least taking the decision, in every race. Possibly this is a coincidence. However, I'm inclined to believe something is amiss. The wire that is used at the finish is put up on a flimsy pole that looks to me as if it will fall any minute. Bowie has a good show scheduled for today with two stake races, the Endurance Handicap, for juveniles at a mile and 70 yards, and the Thomas K. Lynch Memorial, at a mile and a sixteenth for all ages. Limit fields have been named for four races. If you want to play the daily double you had better be on hand early. That's the advice from Mort Mahoney, who has charge of the mutuel department. BILL.

By John R. Vosburgh.

For the nineteenth time since the series began back in 1892, Tech High captured the inter-high football championship yesterday by subduing an obstreperous Roosevelt eleven, 14-0. A small crowd of 1,500 gathered in Tech Stadium to see the Maroon and Gray nailed to the interhigh masthead for the seventh time in the last nine years.

Among the onlookers were members of Central's dethroned interhigh champions of 1935. The erstwhile titleholders watched the same little dynamo, Johnnie Williamson, who led Tech to its 6-0 win over Central, pace the grey-clad gridmen to victory yesterday.

The 140-pound sophomore returned a Roosevelt punt 72 yards on a brainy, spectacular run for the first touchdown and made a great catch of a pass from Quarterback Stanley Wells to lead to the second. He also place-kicked both extra points.

Tech clearly supported its right to the championship by keeping its unscored-upon record intact to the final second of the series. Despite the fact that Western's offense has been much more convincing than Tech's, the fact remains that the Georgetowners were unable to score upon the boys from the Northeast. While this year's team is probably one of the weakest Tech elevens that ever won the championship, its right to the title is vindicated by its defensive record.

Except for a few scattered plays, Tech was unimpressive yesterday. While undefeated, it was also unconvincing from an offensive standpoint. The Grey reached the Roosevelt 23-yard and 30-yard lines in the first three periods but lost the ball both times. A touchdown play in the second period when Tech's Jack Belote passed 15 yards to Walter Connolly who ran 45 more over the goal line was called back because Connolly was offside.

With a scoreless tie looming up late in the third period, Williamson standing on his own 28-yard line, took a punt from Bill Hudson and then treated the fans to an eyefull. He danced around like a tight-rope walker for a few seconds as he side-stepped first one and then another Roosevelt tackler near the left side-line. Then he cut to his right and behind some perfect interference by Ludwig Kroutil, Kirby Foans and Whitey Raulins, raced obliquely across the field, outracing Hudson and Bill Richards on the 15-yard line and running over untouched.

Atkinson Plays Well.

Tech scored again in the same quarter after Harold Welch, subcenter, recovered a fumble by Hudson on the Roosevelt 40. Williamson took a pass from Belote to put the ball on the 30, and Stanley Wells, replacing Belote, shot another to the little halfback, who made a neat catch and banged around to the 6-yard line before being dropped.

Oliver Atkinson, Roosevelt center, who played a bang-up game and recovered three Tech fumbles, gave the Rough Riders their big scoring opportunity late in the fourth period by recovering Williamson's fumble of a punt on the Tech 17, but Kroutil ended the threat by intercepting a pass by Bill Richards on the 6-yard line.

W. Md. Frosh Play C. U., Cubs Today

The final game of the season for the freshman football team at Catholic University is scheduled today in the C. U. Stadium with the kickoff listed for 10:30 a. m., against the Western Maryland freshmen.

For the sixth straight year the C. U. yearlings eleven which is under the guidance of Eddie La Fond and Tom Whalen has been undefeated. So far this season the Cards have thumped Archmere Academy, of Claymont, Del., and Staunton Military Academy.

Several members of the C. U. frosh are expected to land varsity positions next year. Outstanding among this year's list of gridders are Pete Bevilacqua, Carnegie, Pa., end; Leo Dunn, former St. John's fullback; John Fiorellino, Newark, N. J., quarterback; Joe Guyon, son of the former Carlisle and Georgia Tech all-American, and Bill Patterson, former Devitt guard.

McLarnin Beats Ambers by Decision

Gate Is $32,000.

After the even first round, Ambers opened up with a barrage of hooks and jabs that gave him a slight margin in the second session. In the third round Jimmy slowed Lou up with hooks to head and body, but Lou came back to take the fourth, swarming over Jimmy on the ropes. It was in this session that Lou was nailed square on the chin with a right that showed its effects as the bout wore on.

Ambers made his last stand in the fifth. Jimmy had him groggy and bleeding badly from a broken nose. Again in the sixth, Jimmy mashed Lou's chin with a straight right and Lou—still somewhat groggy from the right in the fourth—almost sank to his knees.

This battering continued for the rest of the bout, and as the blows continued to rain on Ambers' face, his lips were cut and oozed blood and the left side of his cheek puffed up like a pink balloon. Lou showed a bit of strength in the eighth, but his rally was short lived. From then on he was just a punching bag.

The gate was $32,084.02.

Army Books St. John's Eleven for '37 Battle

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 20.—The Army will go almost into the Navy's front yard for its opponent in the contest played just before the service school game next year. A battle between the Cadets and St. John's of this city, was announced today by the latter for November 20, at West Point. St. John's, admittedly not in the class of the Army team, plays good football, having lost but one of its seven games this season.

a lively afternoon for the customers and just as exciting as any of its four predecessors. Catholic hopes to ring down the curtain on a disastrous campaign with an impressive victory, and although this is not the Terrors' final contest of the year they need this one in the win column to help balance the books. West Virginia, Albright and Boston College trounced them on successive week-ends, which hasn't improved Western Maryland's belligerent frame of mind.

Turkey Shoot Scheduled For D.C. Gunners Today

The pre-Thanksgiving turkey shoot of the Washington Gun Club will be held on the club grounds today, starting at 1 p. m.

The first event, a 16-yard shoot at 25 targets, will reward the high gun with a turkey. There also will be a 25-target, added target system shoot, based on club averages; a 25-target handicap at distances allotted on scores made in the first 50 targets and a 24 doubles events.

Extra events will be arranged as desired, with one 10-pound turkey given for every five entries at $1.25 each, including targets.

Cox Is Rematched With Garibaldi

Gino Garibaldi's demand for a return wrestling match with Joe Cox paid dividends yesterday when Promoter Joe Turner re-matched them for the Arena next Thursday night.

Principals in one of the year's real thrillers last Thursday when Garibaldi stormed into everything in sight after Cox had been declared the winner, these hard-boiled veterans were eager to oppose again.

Wilson Teachers Seeking First Win

Wilson Teachers will be striving for their only win of the season when they meet the Shephard College eleven today at 2 p. m. at Central Stadium.

Coach Doc White, who has been laboring under handicaps at the Eleventh and Harvard streets institution, is hoping to repeat the work of a year ago. The Eagles downed the Shephard crew 19-7 last season.

For comparison, Shenandoah, beaten by Georegtown and Catholic University, defeated Shephard, 26-6, while the score against Wilson was 32-0.

Kenner Defeats Hayes In Colored Ring Bouts

Jay-Bo Kenner, 200-pound heavyweight, defeated Ernest Hayes, 180 pounds, in a fast and furious three-rounder which topped the semi-finals of the colored golden gloves tournament at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. last night.

Held even in the first round, Kenner rallied in the final two sessions to whip Hayes into submission. In the third, the eventual winner sent Hayes to the floor for an eight count, but had punched himself out seeking a knockout when the bell ended the round.

Other results:

118-pound class—Bill Banks defeated Buddy Bethel.

Scott-Williams Fight Program Is Completed

The preliminary supporting bouts to the Buddy Scott-Charley Williams main event at Turner's Arena next Monday night were announced yesterday. In them Joe Temes will tackle Billy Bullock, Jim Swimmer will engage Country Boy Baggett and Sam Bacala will encounter Tony Amorosa in six-rounders. A four-rounder between George Cox and Velenti Brown will raise the curtain.

Washington Golf Club Lists Turkey Tourney

Ladies of the Washington Golf and Country Club will hold their annual Turkey Day Tournament on Monday. Entrants will compete in two flights, a turkey to be awarded the winner of each flight. The tee-off is scheduled for 9 and 9:30 a. m.

Golfers Heirs to New Ills, Britisher Finds

London, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—"Golfers' shoulder," a newly discovered malady peculiar to golfers, was described in the British Medical Magazine today.

There are two varieties of the pain, said to attack right-handers below the shoulder joint of the left arm. The first is an aching stiffness when the arm is raised at right angles to the body, and the second is a constant, unvarying ache provoked by pressure on the deltoid muscle, which covers the shoulder.

Massaging of the painful spot with hot mineral water and the injection of sodium iodide has proved successful as a daily treatment.

Devitt Is Upset By Eastern, 14 to 12

Passes Bring Both of Winners' Scores in Second Half.

By the grace of two points after touchdowns, the Eastern High School football team closed its 1936 season with a startling upset over a sparkling aggregation of stars playing under the banner of Devitt Prep, yesterday, in the Eastern Stadium before 1,000 onlookers, 14-12.

Handicapped by the injury and loss of Ben Cohen, ace back, who was removed to Georgetown Hospital where several stitches were necessary to close a deep gash incurred in a first period pile-up, the prepmen were unable to hold a first-half lead of one touchdown and trailed in the third quarter by the width of a conversion after having scored in the second quarter on a pass, Fones to Frank, which was good for twenty yards and the score. Try for point, a placekick by Arnold, was wide.

Eastern Passes Score

Eastern, propelled by the magnetized passing combination, Al Kidwell to "Speedy" Kendrick, crossed the goal-line early in the third period and when Miller, sent in to kick the point, converted, the Lincoln Parkers were holders of their not-to-be-relinquished lead.

Once more the deadly passing combine clicked in the last quarter to send Kendrick over from the eleven-yard line, after he had gathered the ball in with a one-handed catch. This time the conversion was registered with a pass, Kidwell to Moran, to make the score read, 14-6.

Devitt, led by Lee Fones, was able to push over another score late in the final period, but it was of slight significance and when the try for point again was wide, the scoring for the day had ended; and, although the losers threatened to advance in the closing seconds of the game, the punting of Davis, sub for Speith, was the means of an eleventh-hour defense.

Woodberry Forest Host to Episcopal

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 20.—Primed as the result of a week of extensive preparation, Episcopal High School's eleven makes its final bid for an unbeaten and untied season tomorrow at Orange, where the Maroons tackle Woodberry Forest in the thirty-sixth renewal of their rivalry. The squad, 33 strong, will leave here by bus tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

Coach Bick Cardwell was undecided on his starting lineup on the eve of a contest for the first time this year, and he will not make his final selections until shortly before game time. However, he said his starting team would be chosen from the following group: Ends, Harbury, Gravatt and Harbison; tackles, Bradfield, Wilson and Daniels; guards, Moncure, Will and Kirkpatrick; center, Barrett, Rinehart and Myers; quarterbacks, Waldrop and Randall; halfbacks, Goodwin, Schley and Neff; fullbacks, Waterman and Hooff.

National Savings Team Is Honored at Banquet

The baseball team of the National Savings & Trust Co., champion of the Bankers League of The Post Association, was given a banquet last night by the bank at the Raleigh Hotel. H. Prescott Gatley, president of the bank, presided.

Gatley introduced Bill Werber, third baseman of the Boston Red Sox, who was principal speaker. Werber presented members of the team with gold baseballs awarded by the league. Among those present were Col. F. A. Fenning, director of the bank; William B. Willard, Bruce Baird and David Bornet, vice presidents; Frank R. Ullmer, treasurer; E. P. Wilson, secretary; B. L. Colton, Hiles W. Pardoe, O. L. Varela, J. W. Calvert, A. J. Fant, H. B. Lord, L. A. Lawrence, Henry Bransom, Charles Fitzgerald, F. Fontaine Hall, Herman Lauten and A. P. Savage.

Browns' Sale Sealed By $100,000 Payment

St. Louis, Nov. 20 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns were formally transferred to their new owners today with payment to the Phil Ball estate of $100,000 on the $325,000 purchase price.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Georgetown vs. Maryland—Maryland has made a habit of winning this one, but that Georgetown line has yielded only one touchdown this season. However, as we go to press, Bill Guckeyson is still in fine health and you can't ignore that. So, with three cheers for Guckeyson, and the best of luck to Georgetown, one resolute vote for Maryland.

POVICH.

Catholic U. vs. Western Maryland—Injuries are a great leveller and they have virtually reduced the Cardinals to the size of Western Maryland. A game that appeared to be a breather a month ago now looms as a struggle for Catholic. But, notwithstanding, one chance-taking ballot for C. U.

Northwestern vs. Notre Dame—Three weeks ago, after Northwestern had turned back Minnesota and Notre Dame had taken a 26-0 pasting from Pitt, you could name your own odds on today's affair. But today you may get 7 to 5 against Notre Dame, and you may not. This department, asking no odds whatsoever, is taking the Irish.

Yale vs. Harvard—The Crimson is beginning to feel the effects of Dick Harlow's coaching and comes up to today's game as a vastly improved team, good enough to tie Princeton with 14 points in the last half. But this is no time to hop off a team that trailed 16-0 last week and then scored four touchdowns to win. One timid vote for Yale.

Dartmouth vs. Princeton—The Hanover Indians have a big bulge here in comparative scores, beating by 26-7 a Harvard team that tied Princeton, 14-14. But after that debacle against Yale last week, the Tigers should be in an annihilating mood. In the very face of the figures, Princeton.

Fordham vs. Georgia—The first inclination is to haul off and pick the unbeaten Fordham club to win by any score you happen to have handy. Only three Saturdays ago, Georgia took a 46-0 licking from Tennessee. But the Rams, methinks, are not all that they are cracked up to be. Georgia will make it tough, but I am constrained to take Fordham.

Duquesne vs. Marquette—After Marquette barely eked out a 7-6 victory over Creighton, this department hopped off the Marquette bandwagon. But that 33-0 victory over Ole Miss last week finds me stringing along again, even against a Duquesne team that was good enough to beat Pitt.

Minnesota vs. Wisconsin—The downtrodden Badgers have been making it tough for the other Big Ten folks but today they're over-matched. If the Minnesota team that scored 50 points against Texas last week drops this one, then their entry should be refused for the rest of the season.

Ohio State vs. Michigan—The Wolverines have been coming along nicely since their early season disasters and looked like the third best team in the Big Ten last week when they held Northwestern to 9-0. But Ohio State has too much power, methinks. Thus, one forthright vote for the Buckeyes.

Temple vs. Iowa—Any team that can take Holy Cross, Michigan State and Villanova on successive Saturdays figures to beat Iowa this season. Pop Warner's Temple team is beginning to click and the Hawkeyes are still the Hawkeyes. Temple, without qualifications.

Purdue vs. Indiana—It's a battle between a couple of Big Ten also-rans, but nothing in Purdue's record is as disappointing as Indiana's 9-7 decision with Syracuse. Purdue by a coupla touchdowns.

Chicago vs. Illinois—Another battle of fallen idols. But the Illini are showing signs and Chicago is still in the ruck, according to that 7-20 licking it took from Indiana last week. Thus, in a breeze, Illinois.

Manhattan vs. Villanova—Up in Brooklyn, Chick Meehan's Jaspers have been on the improve weekly. With their annihilation of Georgetown still fresh in this department's memory, one solid vote for Manhattan.

Mississippi vs. Mississippi State—Without attempting to duck the issue, I remember that anything can happen in this game, including a scoreless tie. It's the day's classic in the deep South. But, stalling no further—Mississippi State.

Landon Prep Beats Friends by 33 to 0

Using its second team for most of the game, Landon Prep swamped Friends School, its old rival, 33 to 0, yesterday in the seventh annual game between the schools at Landon.

Jack Amussen, second-team fullback, scored two of the touchdowns, capping two long marches with plunges over the goal line. Randy Perkins, quarterback, and Dorian, halfback, scored the others. Coach Bob MacCartee inserted his first team at one juncture, watched it score a touchdown with some shifty runs by El Berkeley, in three plays, and then benched the first-stringers.

| Landon. | Position | Friends. |
|---|---|---|
| Pope | L.E. | Hooper |
| Hibbens | L.T. | Chamberlain |
| Randall | L.G. | Duncan |
| Gawler | Center | McKee |
| DeFreyre | R.G. | Kelley |
| Tierny | R.T. | Bravo |
| Wright | R.E. | Cliff Wannan |
| Perkins | Q.B. | Chas. Wannan |
| Cunningham | L.H. | Gordon |
| Dorian | R.H. | Furgerson |
| Amussen | F.B. | Miller |

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|

Petey Sarron Departs For Fight in So. Africa

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Petey Sarron, of Alexandria, Va., National Boxing Association featherweight champion sailed tonight for South Africa to meet Laurie Stevens, British Empire lightweight champion, at Johannesburg, January 6.

Sarron also is negotiating for a match with Freddy Miller, of Cincinnati, from whom he won the title, for a match at Johannesburg, in February.

Crowley Will Speak At D.C. Sports Fete

Jim Crowley, famed as one of Notre Dame's "Four Horsemen," and current coach of the undefeated Fordham eleven, yesterday accepted an invitation to be the chief speaker at the Touchdown Club's All-Sports banquet at the Willard Hotel, December 9.

Like his former mentor, the late Knute Rockne, Crowley has won recognition as one of the most popular speakers in sports ranks. His storytelling twice won awards at the annual national coaches meeting.

National City Games.

The National City Football League schedule for Sunday will call for Regal Clothing's league leaders meeting the Arlington A. A. at Ballston, Va., and the Palace A. C. and the Trinity A. C. clashing at Seat Pleasant, Md. Both games will start at 2:30 p. m.

Sunday Game Wanted.

The 125-pound class Takoma Junior Firemen football team is seeking a game in its class for Sunday. Call Georgia 1359.

Flat 100 Game Is Bowled by Ray Lewis

Income Tax League Star Clears Alley in All Ten Boxes.

A perfect score of 300 in duckpins is something that undoubtedly will never be rolled and a 100 flat game is a rarity which is accomplished no more than once during a season. Last night at the Lucky Strike alleys, Ray T. Lewis, rolling with the Conference Division No. 4 team in the Income Tax League, without a spare break, cleaned the alleys of pins in every frame to chalk up the season's first flat game score of 100.

Deliberately trying to roll a flat game is a formidable task for even the most expert bowler, even though he is trying to miss spare breaks purposely to win the league's usual high flat game prize. It means that he must shoot perfectly with 30 balls.

Many of the Capital's stars will journey to Richmond, Va., today to take part in the first annual "Captain" Frank A. Jett Open Sweepstakes, to be rolled on the John Marshall alleys.

The event, sanctioned by the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, consists of ten games, the first block starting at 3 p. m.

If you don't believe that prosperity has turned the corner and that the depression is of the past, take a stroll into the Convention Hall bowling alleys any Tuesday night at the conclusion of league activities.

The roar which greets you comes from the furthermost corner of the spacious duckpin plant, where spectators are shouting words of encouragement to a pair of average bowlers engaged in a "head to head" pot game (not much different from a two-man sweepstakes tournament). Quoting odds on the favorite at the end of every box with the precision of a Lloyd, and backing its judgment with the bank roll of a comparative Rothschild, the huge gallery, with almost everyone present having a more than passing interest in the outcome of that particular game, is keyed up to the highest pitch of excitement. You can really put your dough on the line and take your choice.

Wheat Prices Jump 2 Cents In Late Flurry

Reports of Dust Storms and Drought Start Buying Wave.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—In a late burst of strength, wheat shot upward 2 cents and rye 2½ cents today to fresh high price records for the season. Reports of dust storms and of widespread moisture shortage adversely affecting domestic crop led to broadened speculative buying both of wheat and rye.

The wheat market as a whole closed strong, ¾ to 2 cents above yesterday's finish; December, 117@117⅛; May, 115⅜@115½; July 104½@104⅝; Corn, 1¼ to 2 cents up; December, 106⅛@106¼; May, new, 99¾@99⅞; July, new 95@96; oats, ½@⅞ advanced; December, 45⅛@45¼, and rye showing 1⅞@2½ cents bulge, December 94⅞@95. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to 7 cents dearer.

Baldwin Gets Order For 30 Locomotives

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Baldwin Locomotive was successful bidder for 30 freight locomotives for the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific. American Locomotive Co. was awarded an order for one streamlined high-speed passenger locomotive. The awards and financing are subject to Federal Court and I. C. C. approval.

Directors of Great Northern Railway today authorized the issuance of a $6,000,000 equipment trust issue for the purpose of purchasing 1,000 box cars, 500 coal cars, 500 ore cars and 12 passenger coaches. The board also authorized the purchase of 20,000 tons of rails.

Youngstown Tube To Spend $10,000,000

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 20 (AP).—Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., announced today improvements costing about $10,000,000 at the Campbell, Brier Hill and Chicago plants.

The improvements at Chicago are under way. Besides betterment of present facilities there, they include expansion of its cold-rolled tinplate mill.

Modification Of Corporation Surtax Likely

Standard Statistics Also Sees Less Federal Expenditure.

New York, Nov. 20.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"The principle which has dominated all others in the Roosevlt Administration has been that of fostering business recovery through a huge outlay of Federal funds, and it is this program for which the electorate voiced overwhelming approval in the 1936 election.

"In view of the huge Democratic majorities established in both houses of Congress, the President is assured of obtaining in 1937 virtually any tax and appropriation measures he may request.

"Briefly summarized, our survey of prospective tax and spending polices leads to the following specific conclusions:

"Revisions of Federal tax measures for 1937 will not involve major changes in rates. The most important prospective revision of present tax procedure will be the expected modification of the surtax in undistributed corporation earnings to ameliorate the burden now placed on many smaller companies.

"Revision or elimination of the capital gains tax is a possibility next year.

"Aggregate Federal tax receipts for 1937 will far exceed those of any year since 1931, reflecting primarily the increased taxes arising from the broad upturn in corporation and individual incomes this year.

"Federal expenditures will probably decline, although at a comparatively slow pace, and aggregate outlays in 1937 will, therfore, still be substantially in excess of Federal revenus.

"For the fiscal year to end June 30, 1938, the deficit should be the smallest since 1931, and the continuing expansion in business volumes and profits may possibly provide sufficiently increased revenues to bring about an approximate balance of Federal receipts and outlays in that period.

"The time when an important reduction in the present Federal debt can be expected is still, however, comparatively remote, probably at least two years away."

$26,628,084 Gold Received in Week

Continuance of the gold flow into this country during the week ended November 13 was reported yesterday by the Commerce Department. Imports for the week totaled $26,628,084, of which $18,167,861 came from the United Kingdom. The total compared with $20,015,211 in the previous week.

Gold exports were listed at $41,707 for the week ended November 13 and $27,046 for the previous week.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Are Irregular in Less Active Trading With Utilities Resistant; Bonds Lower.

New York, Nov. 20.—Irregularity in stock prices continued, with a sharp fall in the trading volume, which encouraged the bulls. In a few sections the tone hardened, and at no time did it look as though heavy liquidation or a spirited rally would develop. Last prices were mostly lower. Stock turnover was well below 2,000,000 shares. Government bonds softened and others were mixed. December wheat closed a half cent higher at 117⅛ cents a bushel.

The stock market is now at a stage at which explanations for its behavior are easy to find, but not particularly convincing. It probably is traveling as usual along a line drawn by a number of conflicting forces. The background of business continues bullish. Industry is still at a fairly high level, with good promise for a winter of increasing employment, seasonal factors considered, and the increase in public spending, everywhere noticeable, makes it unlikely that for a time the corporations will not be able to recoup in higher prices their loss in earnings resulting from increased wages.

For a while at least the profit margin ought to be maintained, or even increased if volume of sales rises. Meanwhile the flood of dividends runs high. Without any other influences at work the position of stocks appears to be strong. The current irregularity or weakness of prices might be explained by the surfeit of bullish news. In spite of the high income taxes on capital gains, short term traders are inclined to take profits.

Outlook Darker Abroad.

In addition to all that, the outlook for a longer distance has become less clear. Affairs in Spain have worsened, and the markets scarcely would be helped much by a general war, with its disruption in trade and bearish impact on foreign currencies. Foreign investments then would be withdrawn, by order of governments, greatly offsetting any private flight of capital to this side. On the domestic side, the drive of the SEC against brokers might also cause some diminution in bullish activity for a while. At any rate, the Government seems to have that in mind. Still further, the movement to repeal the capital gains tax may already be causing some precautionary selling by those who fear heavy unloading by long term investors who find their profits large enough to be worth protecting.

Given freedom from graver European conflict and repressive measures against the rise in stocks by the authorities at Washington, the prospect is bullish enough, but enough is in the air to keep enthusiasm in check. The week-end contribution to the news is of no great importance so far as credit is concerned. The drop of $22,000,000 in brokers' loans scarcely suggests inflation or reason for alarm on the part of the Administration. However, if stocks are not being bought on borrowed money, the credit base continues to widen and foreign funds still are coming this way. Our monetary gold stock this week increased $22,000,000. Along with that the commercial loans of New York banks expanded, suggesting another increase to be shown next week in the report for all member banks.

Government Bonds.

The market for Government bonds was just as indifferent to what on the surface looked to be bullish news as was the stock market. Senator Harrison promised a balanced budget in the 1937 fiscal year, but he weakened the force of his promise by saying that absolutely no new taxes would be voted for next year. That gives a picture of pouvoir and vouloir, in which the ability to meet the desire will depend on a further increase in business prosperity which will at once add to the Government's revenue and cut down its relief expenditures.

Optimists will feel sure of both developments. Given moderate freedom of action, business concerns probably will be able to pay greater taxes next year, but a vast amount of this year's governmental spending was just as unnecessary as it promises to be next year. In any event, if trade is to continue to expand it may be that interest rates also will harden, and that will worry the gilt edged bond market, even with a balanced budget.

Foreign exchanges were dull with dollars firm. Francs were a little lower, but they scarcely were depressed by payment made today of the first portion of the British credit. The payment presumably was made with French gold held in London or from French owned sterling balances there.

Gold Bonds.

The Treasury's liability to pay gold on the public debt is gradually becoming extinguished by the normal course of refunding gold obligations with securities payable in any kind of dollars. Only four issues of Treasury notes remain which on their face are redeemable in gold. Their aggregate amount is $1,954,000,000, or about 18 per cent of the Treasury notes outstanding. The last of the gold discount bills was long since extinguished and all the $2,350,000,000 outstanding are payable in paper dollars. It will be a long time before the last of the long-term gold bonds is redeemed by paper dollars, but even as regards the long-term debt only about 28 per cent remains payable in gold. For a considerable period, gold bonds enjoyed a slightly better rating in the market, but this advantage long since has disappeared, illustration that the public which buys bonds no longer attaches any importance to the repudiated promise to pay gold.

Borrowing and Taxes.

If any substantial number of corporations which are depleting their cash resources by declaration of large dividends to escape the undistributed earnings tax go to the banks for money, the problem of how the money will be repaid, will arise. If it is repaid out of earnings, the money borrowed will cost a corporation much more than the interest which the bank will charge, because the sums set aside out of future earnings to pay off bank loans will not be exempt from the tax upon distributed income. The banks feel strongly that the law should be modified so as to give an exemption to funds applied to reduction of indebtedness and that corporation executives should urge such modification in view of the high cost of paying off loans. Investment houses are hoping for a big increase in issue business from corporations which will sell securities instead of resorting to banks.

Defeatists.

Some members of the New York Stock Exchange apparently have decided that it's no good to hope that the SEC will be merciful to them. Two more sales of memberships were announced today, one at $105,000 and one at $102,000, compared with the sale yesterday at $107,000. The price of seats has come down $33,000 in less than a fortnight, after brokers were assured that the SEC was determined to cut into the trading privileges of brokers. Short of testing the constitutionality of the securities exchange act, which few seem to care for, now that the election returned the New Dealers to power, there is little the Stock Exchange can do to stave off the SEC, except to use arguments which have little weight with men who have made up their minds.

Exchange Seats Drop To Near Year's Low

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Stock exchange seat prices fell to levels close to the year's low today with arrangements for transfer of a membership at $105,000 and another at $102,000. The previous sale brought $107,000. The low price of $100,000 was established last May. The top was $174,000 in February.

In October a seat sold as high as $135,000. Since then the price has steadily declined in spite of sharp upturn in market activity. Stock exchange circles have attributed the movement to the Security & Exchange Commission's regulatory program calling for segregation of dealer-broker functions.

Gen. Elec. Votes $21,634,000 In Dividends

Texas Corp., C. I. T., Mesta and Schenley Also Declare Extras.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—General Electric Co. directors today authorized a distribution of $21,634,000 among the company's 165,700 stockholders by ordering an extra dividend of 50 cents and regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common stock. Both are payable December 21 to stock of record November 27. The company also announced that at the request of employes, payments under the general profit sharing plan will be made semi-annually. Last year 41,000 employes divided about $1,500,000.

Texas Corporation, a leading unit in the oil industry, today gave $4,669,000 to shareholders by declaring an extra dividend of 25 cents and a regular quarterly dividend of the same amount on the capital stock. An extra of 25 cents was paid October 1.

Directors of Commercial Investment Trust Corporation, a financing organization, today declared an extra dividend of $1.25 a share totalling $2,946,000, on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividends of $1 a share on the common and $1.06¼ on the preferred.

Schenley Melon.

Schenley Distillers Corporation cut a big melon with stockholders in the form of an extra dividend of $1.50 cash on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents, the whole totaling $4,987,500. In addition, the company declared a dividend of $2.50, payable in 5½ per cent preferred stock on the common stock. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.37½ on the preferred stock was declared, payable January 1 to shareholders of record December 12.

Niagara Hudson Power Co. resumed dividends with payment of 40 cents a common share, the first since March, 1933. The payment will aggregate $3,495,524 and will benefit 88,700 shareholders.

A Christmas dividend of 50 cents a share and an additional dividend of 75 cents was declared by the Mesta Machine Co., of West Homestead, Pa. The total disbursement for the two dividends will be $1,250,000.

Cannon Mills declared a $2 dividend on the common stock, compared with $1 paid in October, the distribution totaling $1,975,000.

The United Carbon Co. announced a Christmas bonus equivalent to a half-month's pay for all employees and an extra dividend of 75 cents a share on its stock.

Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co., Hartford, Conn., voted $1.25 a share extra for shareholders and extra compensation for 2,100 workers equal to 5 per cent for 1936 earnings.

Bond Average Gains 9 Points This Year

Boston, Mass., Nov. 20.—Bond sales in October hit a high total, making October the largest month in point of sales since last January and the largest October since 1931. Furthermore, during the past year the Dow-Jones average of 40 bonds jumped close to nine points.

Dividend, Bonus By Continental Oil

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ponca City, Okla., Nov. 20.—Continental Oil Co. employes will share with stockholders in a large distribution of earnings on December 15 with payment to employes of a special bonus of 1936 earnings at the same time stockholders receive a dividend of 25 cents per share, it was announced here today by President Dan Moran.

Permanent employes with one year's service or more up to December 1, will receive two weeks' wages or a half month's salary, while those with less than one year's service on that date will be given one week's wages, or a quarter month's salary. The dividend is payable December 15 to stockholders of record November 30.

"This distribution of earnings to about 5,000 employes is most liberal," said Moran, "when it is considered that wages and salaries paid by Continental Oil Co. are in excess of those generally paid in other industries and in view of the fact that the company has never made a general wage or salary reduction even during the depression period."

During the first nine months of 1936 Continental Oil Co. earned $8,083,624, which is equivalent to $1.72 per share, while the earnings for the same period last year were $5,068,802, or $1.18 per share.

Calvert Announces Christmas Bonus

The Calvert Distilling Co., through its president, Edwin M. Fleischmann, announced yesterday that a Christmas bonus of two weeks' wages will be distributed December 15 to all employes who have been on the pay roll of the company prior to July 1, this year, and to all temporary employes a bonus of $10.

This affects all employes of the Calvert Distilling Co., not only in its Relay, Md., plant, where 850 are employed at present, but also its Louisville plant and the sales organization from coast to coast.

Love Bird Pair Draws Crowds In Canary Show

Fanciers' Second Annual Exhibit; 422 Songsters Put on Display.

Master Will Shakespeare was wrong, at least as far as the Kingdom of Birds is concerned.

The course of true love does run smooth, and it is honeycombed with the gayest of melodies and the most romantic of billings and cooings, as thousands of Washingtonians who visited the second annual Bird Show, under the auspices of the National Capital Canary Club, in the Continental Hotel, discovered yesterday and last night.

Particular favorites of the spectators were the love birds.

Never a cross chirp came from their cages. Apparently they did not mind being behind bars.

Romeo and Juliet, for instance, were entered by Miss Rose Amelia Rosson, of 1203 North Herndon street, Clarendon, Va. What Romeo said to Juliet might have been:

"We seem to be interesting a lot of nice-looking people. Let's put on a good show."

There were 422 birds on exhibit from the Washington and Baltimore areas.

Awards of silver cups were made to Miss Pearl Kolb, of Baltimore, for the best bird in the show, a white Yorkshire; E. M. Jameson, of 1237 W street southeast, for the border fancy; Miss Kolb for the best Yorkshire and the best male white; Mrs. John Balabs, of Baltimore, for the best cinnamon; Mr. Jameson for the best border fancy; Raymond Letner, of 1510 Ridge place southeast, for the best Norwich; W. V. James, of 3103 Alabama avenue southeast, for the best female of the Hartz type; Miss Kolb for the best variegated male; F. J. Jefferson, 22 South Pershing drive, Arlington, for the best hybrids; Mr. Letner for the best bird by a junior boy, and Miss Rosson for the best bird by a junior girl.

Woman Murdered With Axe Handle Found by Hunters

South Boston, Va., Nov. 20 (AP).—The body of a white woman with dark brown hair was discovered by hunters near Hyco, in Halifax County, today.

Officers said she had been dead about six weeks. An axe handle was found beside the body. A dent in the woman's skull indicated that she had been struck on the head. Her front teeth had been knocked out.

No missing persons had been reported to Halifax County officers. A clasp found on the woman's clothing carried the initial "A."

2d Victim Dead In Suicide Pact

William J. Glatzel, 48, Baltimore salesman, who entered a death pact with his wife, Minnie, also 48, in a downtown hotel Thursday, yesterday joined her in death.

Frustration and financial difficulty attendant on his decline from sales supervisor, to a job at a small salary selling materials was the reason for the double suicide before he died.

Mrs. Glatzel succumbed almost immediately after swallowing poison. Taken to Emergency Hospital, Glatzel was transferred to Gallinger, where he talked to police.

The death pact was formed two years ago on mutual suggestion, Glatzel said. He told Detectvie Sergt. Clyde N. Strange he purchased the poison Wednesday night, and next day he and his wife mixed it with water, and raised their glasses in a final toast.

Chicago Knife-Wielder Kills Kinsman, Hurts 2

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—John Sargus, 47, surrendered to police today with a bloody butcher knife in his hand and related how he fatally stabbed his brother-in-law and slashed two women in a family quarrel.

The police found the mutilated body of Abraham Jacobs, 30, in the apartment kitchen. Mrs. Elsie Sargus, John's wife, and Miss Toma Jacobs, were stabbed critically.

Policeman Edward Johnson said Sargus told him, "I'm glad I did it. I didn't like any of them."

The fight ensued, he said, after his wife accused him of unfaithfulness.

Snake Killer Given Stay of Execution

Los Angeles, Nov. 20 (AP).—Shortly before a scheduled departure for a San Quentin death cell, Robert James, the marrying Alabama barber convicted of murdering the last of his many wives, was granted a short stay of execution today.

James, sentenced to death on the charge he killed Mary James by rattlesnake bite and drowning, will not start for San Quentin Prison until December 5.

The stay was granted by Superior Judge Joseph M. Vickers on motion of James' attorney, William J. Clark, who said his client might have to testify in a civil suit.

Mad Bull Kills Farmer.

Dundee, Ill., Nov. 20 (AP).—Arthur E. Howard, 56, Kane County cattle breeder, was gored to death today by a bull that attacked him on his farm near here. He was dead when relatives reached him.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 20.—The uncertain international situation, coupled with lack of new buying and the withdrawal of some weak accounts, had a depressing effect on the stock market. Motor, silk and tobacco shares were in large supply and the oil and mining sections were also weak. Foreign bonds moved irregularly, while gilt-edged securities remained quiet, with the new British funding issue selling at par. Transatlantic issues were heavy. Rubber shares finished 3d to 6s 6d centimes higher, although the remainder of the list was mixed. Canadian Pacific lost six francs and Bank of France closed 45 francs down.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures finished ¾d lower. Excellent harvesting weather was reported in northern Argentine, and continental traders sold some wheat. Cotton was dull, closing 3 lower to 2 higher. Trading was confined principally to local exchanging from nearby to distant positions.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Dealings were sluggish in foreign exchange markets yesterday and price fluctuations were extremely narrow.

Unchanged from the previous close in New York were the pound sterling at $4.89, the French franc at 4.65⅛ cents, the Swiss franc at 22.99½ cents and the Canadian dollar at 100.18¾ cents.

The Netherlands guilder was up .02 of a cent at 54.10 cents and the Belgian belga, at 16.91½ cents, was down .00½ of a cent.

In London the dollar closed unchanged at 4.89⅛ to the pound, which compared with the New York overnight rate of $4.89. In Paris it finished at the equivalent of 4.651 cents to the franc, unchanged, as compared with the New York overnight rate.

Montreal Silver Futures.

On the Air Today

Niela Goodelle will sing "One Rose" in her stage appearances this week at the Earle, despite the fact she never heard of the tune until she was urged to include it for the Washington engagement.

Back of this local partiality to "One Rose" is an interesting story. And since it originates with those tireless workers of WMAL's extremely early and extremely late shifts—Jim McGrath and Lee Everett—there doubtless is ample reportorial accuracy to the tale.

It seems that many months ago Everett was toiling at his midnight to 2 a. m., record turntables when a telephone call came from Lieut. Jim Kelly, of the Metropolitan Police. Kelly who knows a bit about radio himself, being in charge of WPDW of the police department.

"How about a simple ballad of the wide open spaces," inquired Kelly. "You know, the kind of tune that has sage brush mixed up in it."

Everett had been playing Benny Goodman for an hour or so and the request forced him to go to a record file and grab the first disc that came under the heading of "hillbilly and plains" songs.

It turned out to be "Red River Valley." And from that night on, demands for "Red River Valley" mounted. So rapidly and in such numbers that WRC finally set up a half-hour period at noontime under that title, to play songs of the same type

Further, the incident was the beginning of a beautiful friendship between Everett and Kelly. And then, not so long ago, Kelly came to Everett with another record. He was positive it would be a hit if brought to the listeners' attention. And it was "One Rose."

Everett played it. And the public took to it with a vengeance. In an incredibly short time it became the post-midnight audience favorite. Soon Gordon Hittenmark began to receive scores of requests for it—and he formed a Time-Keeper's "One Rose" club.

Professional musicians visiting in Washington would hear of its popularity and reported they never had heard of the tune before. Band leaders in the "big-time" had no orchestrations for it. Two readings by two orchestras had been made of it—and that was all. Everyone admitted that outside of Washington no one knew "One Rose."

In the meantime, Jim Kelly sits back and owlishly says: "That song'll take the country by storm one of these days. We're just laying a little ground work here in Washington."

Here and there: WOL gives an increased late evening dance band service to Washington listeners each Saturday night, beginning tonight. WOL is proud of its roster of orchestras presented from 11 o'clock on and henceforth will stay on the air until 2 a. m. . . . Eddie Elkins and his orchestra, opening Tuesday night at the Raleigh's new Pall Mall Room, probably will be picked up by Columbia for a network airing two or three times weekly. The opening night from the Pall Mall Room will be broadcast by WJSV, beginning at 11:30.

Chuckle of the day: Visitors at Radio City the other day were interviewed by Ben Grauer in a special tenth anniversary broadcast. On being questioned by Grauer, one after another named their favorite orchestra leaders. But—Andre Kostelanetz and Guy Lombardo were most frequently mentioned. Those questioned didn't realize, of course, that neither orchestra is heard over N.B.C. networks!

Capital Hunters Bag 256-Pound Bear in Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

The Napiers, who have been visiting their father, J. O. Napier, planned to go into the higher peaks of the Blue Ridge in search of bear. To their surprise, they encountered the big fellow in the foothills near Black Rock and Devil's Knob Mountain.

Patent System Diners to List Inventive Great

Secret Ballot to Pick Ten Deceased Leaders at Centennial Fete.

Surrounded by secrecy of the deepest dye, an honor roll of the ten greatest deceased American inventors is being selected as a feature of the "patented dinner" Monday night celebrating the centennial of the patent system.

Thomas Midgley, jr., prominent chemist, is chairman of the nominating committee, none of whose members know the names of their colleagues. Midgley alone knows the makeup of the group whose ballots will decide and the nominators know only that Midgley, to whom they are forwarding their lists, is chairman.

Conway P. Coe, patents commissioner, will read the consensus at the Mayflower Hotel banquet Monday but even he won't know the names of "the ten greatest" until a few minutes before he faces the microphone. Then the news will be given the world, for the program is to be broadcast by radio.

In connection with the patent system centennial, one of America's leading inventors yesterday emphasized the importance of chemistry as a rich field for discovery and invention.

Carleton Ellis, whose 672 patents place him third in the list of those holding the greatest number, predicted the wider use of synthetic materials to replace nature's products.

"Many of these synthetic substances," he said, "will be derived from cheap materials and frequently from outright wastes.

"The unusual demands upon the country's many natural products indicates the approach of the day when these products will be virtually depleted. At that time—and I am, of course, unable to predict how soon it will come—the efforts of science and invention will create synthetic compounds to meet the demand.

"Already scientific efforts in developing synthetic materials go beyond mere efforts to duplicate the products of nature. In many cases we now have synthetic materials which improve upon nature itself."

Singing Club Marks 60th Anniversary

Celebrating its sixtieth anniversary, the Maennergesangverein of Washington will give a special autumn concert tomorrow evening in Arcadia Hall, assisted by the Deutscher Damenchor and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Glee Club. The festival program will be directed by Max Gundlich, and the glee club numbers will be conducted by Robert Davidson.

Included in the program are: "Das Feutsche Lied" (Kalliwoda), "An die Nacht" (Abt), "Veilchen aus Abbazia" (Wenzel), "Es zog der Maienwind zu Thal" (Sturb), "Wie koennt' ich dein vergessen" (Tuerk), and "Abendchor" from Kreutzer's opera, "Das Nachtlager von Granada."

Under Robert Davidson's direction, the glee club will sing "Jerusalem Morning" (arr. O'Hara), "Go Down, Moses" (arr. Huntley), "Golden Slippers" (arr. Zeiner), "Dear Land of Home" (Sibelius), "I Dream of Jeanie" (Stephen Foster), and "Pirate Song" (Freeman High).

Vocal Concert Date Postponed to Nov. 28

The concert of the Kedroff Vocal Quartet, scheduled for next Tuesday night in Constitution Hall, has been postponed until Sunday night, November 28, according to announcement made by Renoux Smith, of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau. A change in routing of the quartet, which is now on tour, necessitated postponement.

As Constitution Hall could not be secured for the postponement date, the concert will be given in the Mayflower Hotel. The program will consist of classical songs by Russian composers, and folk songs both dramatic and humorous. The members of the vocal quartet are I. K. Dennisoff, T. F. Kasakoff, N. N. Kedroff and K. E. Kaidanoff.

Abnormal Worry Is Reported Relieved by Brain Operation

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 20.—A new form of brain surgery which in a few selected cases has given noteworthy relief to persons suffering from abnormal worry, apprehension, anxiety, sleeplessness and nervous tension was announced today before the closing session of the Southern Medical Association.

Dr. Walter Freeman and Dr. James Watts, of the George Washington University Medical School, Washington, described operations, performed on six patients, all of whom have been materially improved. The first operation was performed only two months ago and the doctors said they have no data on the permanent effects of the operation or the ability of the patients to return to work.

The symptoms of extreme nervousness, worry, apprehension, anxiety and sleeplessness seem to constitute a "common denominator" in several mental diseases, the Washington scientists said.

The operation originated in Portugal about a year ago blocks off a portion of the impulses running to and from the prefrontal lobes of the brain which lie just behind the forehead. It is relatively safe and the results are practically immediate, the reported.

The operation consists of boring two holes with a surgical augur through the skull at points three centimeters to the right and left of the mid-line of the skull and the removal of six cores of brain tissue about the size of a marble.

Few bad post-operative effects have been noted, it was pointed out, since the brain tissues are apparently entirely insensitive to pain.

The operation tends to put a brake on the activity of the frontal lobes affecting the personality of the individual. The actual functions of the frontal brain lobes are still quite obscure. They have been considered "the seat of intelligence," but, the Washington physicians said, seem to be intimately connected with ambition, inhibitions and emotional tones, and serve as a driving force for the rest of the brain.

The Washington scientists emphasized in concluding their report that they had operated only on carefully selected cases and did not advocate the operation for definite mental derangements or general nervous conditions.

Arms Embargo Right Debated In High Court

Second New Deal Case on Prison-Made Goods Is Also Before Bench.

By the Associated Press.

Two New Deal cases, involving an embargo on sale of munitions for warring nations and an act prohibiting shipment of prison-made goods into States which ban their sale, were taken under consideration yesterday by the Supreme Court.

Decisions in both are possible as early as December 7.

Concluding arguments were heard on whether Congress had delegated legislative power improperly in authorizing President Roosevelt to forbid the sale of munitions in this country to Bolivia and Paraguay for use in the recent Chaco war.

The Court then listened to arguments on constitutionality of the 1935 Ashurst-Sumners prison goods act, which requires that such products be labeled convict-made.

Validity of the act was challenged by the Kentucky Whip and Collar Co., a manufacturer of horse collars and harness at the Eddyville, Ky., State Penitentiary. It sought to compel the Illinois Central Railroad to accept shipments which did not comply with the law.

The arms embargo argument was on the Government's appeal from a ruling by the Southern New York Federal District Court holding Congress' 1934 resolution applying to the Chaco war constituted an unconstitutional delegation of power.

A group of New York concerns indicted on a charge of conspiring to sell 15 machine guns to Bolivia won in the lower court.

Representing them before the high tribunal, George Z. Medalie, former United States district attorney at New York, argued that Congress had given the President too much power and that it "should safeguard its functions."

His associate, William Wallace, a New York attorney, asserted the resolution was "an improper attempt to let the President make laws."

In rebuttal for the Government, Martin Conboy, also a former Federal district attorney at New York, cited the authority delegated to the President by Congress to raise or lower tariff rates.

Pan-Hellenic Unit Sets Charity Ball for Tonight

The Non-Academic Pan-Hellenic Association of Washington will hold a charity ball in the Mayflower Hotel tonight for the benefit of Children's Hospital, it was announced last night. The ball is an annual affair. Each year the proceeds are used for some charitable purpose.

Heading the committee in charge of this year's ball is Miss Marguerite Throckmorton, of Phi Sigma Epsilon sorority. Other members include Mrs. Mary Neilson, Alpha Zeta sorority; Mrs. Maurine Simmers, Sigma Epsilon; Miss Virginia Morris, Phi Beta Psi; Miss Peggy Cannon, Sigma Phi Gamma; Mrs. Lillian Walker, Tau Beta Phi, and Miss Winifred Huck, Lambda Chi. The association is composed of Washington chapters of seven national sororities.

Chinese Repel Mongol Troops In Chahar Area

1,500 Invaders, Officered by Japanese, Routed With Heavy Losses.

By the Associated Press.

Kweisui, Suiyuan Province, China, Nov. 20.—Chinese troops drove Mongol invaders back into Chahar province today with heavy losses while from Pailingmaio came reports the city was endangered by troops under Japanese command.

Chinese sources said 1,500 Mongols commanded by 12 Japanese officers threatened to cut off the Suiyuan city from assistance and to blockade routes for delivery of food and war supplies.

Provincial Governor Gen. Fu Tso-Yi, arriving here from Tsining, said his troops drove invaders back in headlong retreat and established positions within close to Shangtu, 30 miles inside Chahar province.

He was confident his forces now could control the eastern border.

A band of hostile irregulars in a new attempt to dynamite the railroad near Fengchen, south of Tsining, caused a seven-hour interruption of service.

(Tokyo advices said the Suiyuan disturbances led Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe to inform Chinese officials at Nanking that negotiations over anti-Japanese demonstrations in the northern provinces would be discontinued until the situation eased.

(Chinese have charged invasion of the northern provinces is inspired by Japanese who seek to dominate the area as they now dominate Manchoukuo. Japanese assert they desire only to lend China "assistance" in developing her industries and vast natural resources).

Health Unit Honors Alexandria Woman

Miss Pearl McIver, of Alexandria, Va., yesterday was elected second vice president of the Southern Branch of the American Public Health Association, in session at Baltimore.

Municipal Judges Confer With Lawyers, Laymen on Establishment.

A small claims court for the District of Columbia appeared certain last night following an unprecedented conference between the five Municipal Court judges and representatives of various legal and civic groups.

The proposed "poor man's court"—sponsored by Municipal Court Judge Nathan Cayton—received support from all sides at yesterday's meeting in the courtroom of Judge George C. Aukam.

Main opposition to establishment of a small claims court came from George Sullivan, chairman of the legal committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Although agreeing that such a court should be established, he opposed certain operating rules suggested by Judge Cayton.

Albert Steinem, chairman of the Municipal Court committee of the District Bar Association, told the meeting that his association was "not ready" to discuss the project. His committee, Steinem declared, has already approved Judge Cayton's plan, but the District Bar Association has postponed action.

Mrs. Peral Klein, of the Women's Bar Association, said her group had agreed to support the movement. But she, too, objected to certain parts of the operation plan and advocated changes.

Indorsement of the small claims court—to try cases involving $50 or less—came also from the Washington Lawyers' Club and other legal groups.

A majority vote of the five Municipal Court judges is all that is needed to establish the proposed court.

Busy Krupp Gun Plant Celebrates 125th Year

Essen, Germany, Nov. 20 (AP).—The historic Krupp Gun Works celebrated its 125th anniversary today, busier than at any time since the World War. Bonuses were distributed to former employes and their widows.

The pay roll now includes more than 100,000 workers (in the World War there were 171,000) and one of the most pressing problems is the shortage of skilled labor.
